MRS. RUTHERFURD STUYVESANT.

He is a descendant of the illustrious Peter Stuyvesant, the most famous Dutch Governor of New York. It is interesting, therefore, to know that Mrs. Stuyvesant is a member of the nation from which her husband's ancestors originally came. Before her marriage she was the Comtesse Mathilde de Wassenaer, widow of a Dutch nobleman.

Mrs. Stuyvesant is a very interesting figure in New York society for many reasons. She is the only woman of foreign birth and noble family occupying a very prominent position in that society. In personal appearance she is very attractive, and at the same time quite different from the commonly admired types of American beauty. She has a wide acquaintance with Continental society, and she possesses the graceful manners, the pleasing speech and the cultivated mind which are usually associated with social position in European capitals.

Her intellectual charms, as one society woman expressed it, are remarkable, and include a profound knowledge of music, art and literature. She is indeed considerably more intellectual than it is the fashion to be in the "400," but she has formed a set of her own, and perhaps in the near future we shall hear that smart society is abandoning rag-time for the higher learning.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant possess an interesting old house called Tranquility Farms, near Hackettstown, N. J. It is the original Rutherfurd homestead, greatly enlarged. It is big and comfortable and quite romantic in aspect. Mr. Stuyvesant is so fond of old trees that he will not allow even those that grow close to the house to be cut down, and consequently it has a dark and mysterious look.

The house contains a magnificent collection of ancient German armor, some fine china and some remarkable paintings. The property around it consists of about seven thousand acres, and is a delightful place to wander in. It includes a park, well stocked with elk and deer, ponds where beavers build and wild ducks swim, and one of the finest pheasant preserves in this country. Some 1,500 of these birds are bred every year.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant also have a fine old-fashioned house at Second avenue and Fifteenth street, New York. In this neighborhood most of the property of the Rutherfurd and Stuyvesant families is situated, and here were the original family homesteads. There is a very fine collection of Italian old masters in this house, in which Mr. Stuyvesant takes great pride.

It is a curious fact that Rutherfurd Stuyvesant began life as Stuyvesant

HOTEL FOR BABIES ONLY

THE "HOTEL FOR BABIES" IN THE FASHIONABLE WEST END OF LONDON.

HOW THE GUESTS OF THE BABIES' HOTEL ARE AMUSED AND CARED FOR.

Little Lodgers in This Exclusive Hostelry Must Be Strictly Aristocratic and Able to Pay High Prices for Their Luxury.

By Viola Rodgers.

London, Sept. 22.

IF one is a very spectacular little baby and papa's bank account is an unguessed reality, and exceeds four figures, then one can have one's name registered and stop for any length of time at the Horland Babies' Hotel, No. 7 Pembridge Square, in the fashionable West End, but those are the first requirements, and, consequently, many an infant quite unconscious of the fine lines of social demarkation has arrived at the fashionable hostelry to find "everything full up."

The plebeian infant has doubtless enjoyed the little outing, for the Horland Hotel for Infants is just a two minutes' walk from Kensington Gardens and in the fashionable Hyde Park neighborhood.

It even blissfully ignorant, poor little dear, of the fact that as a social climber it has proved a flat failure. But there are infants that have passed through without any to-do whatsoever, for they come with proper credentials, among which must be a letter from some clergyman, or doctor, or lawyer, or better still, some banker, as well as one or more from socially prominent persons, which are as good for the baby as a bow from the King to the debutante.

The hotel is so exclusive, however, that there are only sixteen babies admitted at one time, and sometimes there is a long waiting list of eligibles.

The building used for the hotel was formerly the mansion of a fashionable London family who have moved over into Park Lane, Mayfair, and consequently it is a splendid airy home with a lovely garden in the back and with fine large rooms with high ceilings and immense windows. It is the very best kind of place for its present use, not first of all, the little hotel guests must have fresh air and light and the trees and flowers to look out upon.

It was with the greatest interest that I made a tour of inspection through the entire establishment, and I went away quite satisfied that the idea was not a bad one at all—especially when I found that, in the majority of cases, the parents of the children, the youngest of whom is five months, were traveling about in the Orient, India, South Africa or Egypt, where the climate in every case was most trying and in many instances would be fatal to Western-born children.

To begin with, the nurses who have charge of the children are quite out of the usual, so the superintendent, Miss Isabel Sharman, of the Horland Institute for Nurses which founded the hotel, informed me. They are all girls from highly respectable families, and in many instances people of considerable social position, but who have tired of the frivolities of the butterfly life and find the vocation not an overcrowded one as are many of the callings for women in London.

They are first instructed for nine months in the Institute and then when they have been instructed in hygiene, physiology, the chemistry of foods and other necessary knowledge, they are sent as under nurses to the Babies' Hotel where they work under the staff nurses for several weeks and as fast as the staff nurses obtain employment in private families they are replaced by the under nurses.

There are, however, three grades of prices which might compare in proportionate figures to apartments at the Ritz, say, with bath, with sitting room and bath, or just a single room. The babies' hotel is divided into single infant's nurseries, which are 20x16 feet, and suites, having a day nursery communicating with its night nursery. Then there are smaller suites, where several children are accommodated in the same apartments.

The very most exclusive child may have a single suite by paying the price of the two other beds in the room.

The arrangement of the groups of three is interesting and is made to represent as nearly as possible three children from one family. They are chosen with regard to years. The oldest may be three or four years of age, the next child two, or one, perhaps, and the other is generally an infant too young to toddle. Games of every kind are either provided by the hotel from a fund given by the parents for that purpose, or they are sent them by friends. All the children who occupy the same suite, however, play with each other's toys just as if they belonged to one family.

To-day, when I visited one of the three children suites, a canary bird in a pretty brass cage had just arrived and was causing the greatest joy imaginable to the little ones. They are never allowed to lose sight of the fact that they have a mamma and papa who are coming for them some time, and it is not surprising that whenever a visitor calls the little folks first exclaim "Mamma," or "Papa," depending on the sex of the caller.

Instead of being numbered the rooms and suites are much more prettily designated with names upon the doors such as "Forget-Me-Not," "Freedom," "Joy," "Travel" and the like.

In each room there are two nurses, one for day attendance and the other a night nurse who sleeps in the room. The hotel is in no way a hospital, but children who for any reason become ill are attended by a staff physician, or, if their parents' request it, by their own family physician.

The children have three meals a day, breakfast at 8, dinner at 1 and tea at 5.

The following menus in relation are provident:

BREAKFAST.

Cereal and eggs. Porridge and fish.
Oatmeal and bacon toast.
Cereal, cream and toast.

DINNER.

Boiled fowl. Loin of Mutton.
Beef tea, poached egg. Fish and mutton broth.
Green vegetables three times a week.
Milk pudding, stewed fruits, baked apples.
Custard, jelly.

TEA.

Brown and white bread buttered.
Sponge cake. Fancy biscuits.
Toast and jam without seeds.
Swiss roll.

If the parents care to provide their children with other edibles that are considered by the nurses harmless, they are also given to them.

In order that they may have a change of air, a cottage at Field Row, Bognor, Sussex, is provided, but babies under six months are not allowed to go unless by order of their physicians. The children who pay the highest fees at the hotel have the best rooms at the seaside. There are no extra charges for the seaside hotel except the fares for the child and its attendant nurse.

These there must be perambulators provided for the babies for their two hours' ride morning and afternoon in Kensington Gardens, and sums provided for wear and tear of clothes and other incidental expenses, which include medicines, etc. For the older children the lump sum to include all incidentals, is from $500 to $900 a year, doctors' and dentists' fees extra.

The children who live in the family groups do not see the other children in the hotel except upon some special occasion when a general tea or party is given. They are then turned loose in one of the larger nurseries and the occasion is one of great joy.

"We find this much the better method," said the head staff nurse to me, "for it gives the children something to look forward to. Of course we teach them to sing little songs and to recite verses and we train them morally more or less, by teaching them little prayers and correcting their shows of bad temper which occasionally occur. The hotel is absolutely nonsectarian, but if the parents of the various children want us to teach their children any specific prayers or songs, we always do so," she continued.

"We have had two American children this fall," said Miss Sharman, "one a little thing of six months who was brought here by a New York couple who for business reasons had to reside for a year in South Africa, and then we had a child brought to us when it was just a month old which was born in London but of American parents who wanted to travel for some months on the Continent.

"The little thing grew fat and lovely and they were delighted with its beauty when after the visit they came to return with it to America."

EVERY BABY IS WEIGHED DAILY.

Society Leaders No. 2, Mrs. Rutherfurd Stuyvesant

Rutherfurd, for he was only a Stuyvesant on his mother's side. Then his rich Uncle Stuyvesant left him all his property, and he gave that historic name the leading position. His brother, Winthrop Rutherfurd, and his sister, Mrs. Henry White, wife of the American Ambassador at Rome, expected that Mr. Rutherfurd Stuyvesant, who was a widower, would not marry again, and that they or their children would inherit his great property. They were therefore, it is presumed, somewhat chagrined when his marriage to the Countess de Wassenaer was celebrated in London after a very brief and unexpected engagement. Their feeling must have installed when the new Mrs. Stuyvesant became the mother of a vigorous boy. It has even been said that if the entire family, including Mrs. "Winnie" Rutherfurd, who was formerly Miss Alice Morton, and Mrs. "Airy" White, the Ambassador's wife, were gathered together at Tranquillity Farms, that opulent place would find itself inappropriately named.

In addition to their American establishment, Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant have a fine house in Paris, in the Rue Dumont d'Urville. There they pass a considerable part of every year. Mrs. Stuyvesant gave a big dinner party in her Paris house early this Summer, which was one of the interesting occurrences of the season in the French capital. The reception rooms were filled with masses of white roses, and the table was decorated with flowers of the same kind, which harmonized admirably with the beautiful silver plate. It was a white dinner.

"CLUCK CLUCK"— A Romance of Newport

"Cluck-Cluck," Says Mrs. Aurel Batonyi to Her Sons, the "Roche Twins." "Cluck-Cluck," Says Mrs. Watts Sherman to Her Daughters, the "Sherman Twins."

And Forthwith Two Pairs of Cooing Sweethearts Are Separated, to Be Brooded Homeward By Their Respective Mammas—While Newport Smiles and Cupid Weeps.

IF you have ever seen and heard two solicitous hens cluck-clucking to their respective but intermingled broods, to thus gathering about them, each her very own chicks, and marching them off to prop er and dignified domestic seclusion—then you will understand the spectacle that amused Newport cottagers all this last season, while confronting Cupid with one of the most difficult problems in all the little rosy god's career.

"Cluck-cluck," says Mrs. Aurel Batonyi to her sons, the "Roche twins."

"Cluck-cluck," says Mrs. Watts Sherman to her daughters, the "Sherman twins."

And forthwith two pairs of cooing sweethearts are separated, to be brooded homeward by their respective mammas—while Newport smiles, and Cupid weeps.

Even Cupid, master of craft and arts, does not know what to do.

It is as though the story of Romeo and Juliet were being repeated in modern times, repeated and doubled, for this story has two Romeos and two Juliets, and the Romeos are twins, and the Juliets are twin sisters.

They are, like the other Romeo and Juliet, very young.

Like that pair of immortal lovers they are much in love.

And like that unhappy pair, their tender love is being bruised against the cold, unstirrable wall of parental opposition.

Likewise against which the drama of youthful love is being played is the gloomy one of family feud.

The Roche, twins aged twenty-two, and the Sherman twins, aged twenty, are learning that love may be stronger than the law, but that the law has the skill wherewith to overpower love. Also that, whereas they formerly shared each other's joys, they must now share each other's sorrows. That being twins has many disadvantages and they are considering the paraphrasing of an old saw into "Divided we stand, united we fall."

One pair of lovers may moon along the cliffs unnoticed, but two pairs will challenge attention. Yet on the other hand when twins have been seemingly inseparable the instant demand from one pair is for the other. Therefore, Edmund Francis Burke Roche, future Lord Fermoy, says sadly to his brother:

"Twins may be chums, but they are also expected to be patrolmen watching and responsible for each other."

George Francis, the future Lord Fermoy's brother, younger by an inconsiderable time according to the family doctor, yet sufficiently younger to lose the title that will descend to his brother, answers:

"Yes, and have you noticed that while ordinary folk grow up, twin never do."

Perhaps George Francis's observation is correct.

For it is noticeable that when he plays golf with Mildred Sherman, his mother, Mrs. Aurel Batonyi, formerly Mrs. James Boothby Burke Roche, is certain to appear, and gently but firmly interrupt the game.

"My son, I want you to take me for a drive to the farm."

"Delighted, mother dear, but will you excuse me until I finish the game?"

"I am sorry, darling, but I must go at once. Miss Sherman will accept a substitute. Mr. Lehr will be delighted, I'm sure. Go and call him."

And George Francis, flushing, obeys. It is noticeable that while Mr. Aurel Batonyi waits for her son's return, she does not converse with Miss Mildred Sherman, who, with cheeks ablaze, bends over her mortiress nail and seems to be lost in unpleasant thought. Even so Juliet looked from her casement and communed with the moon.

Similarly, Mrs. Watts Sherman, encountering Edmund Maurice, future Lord Fermoy, playing casuine one August morning for Miss Irene Sherman, charges called one of the freckled small boys, whose duties the help of an earlship had usurped, and Edmund Maurice, laughing a little shamefacedly, lifted the boy and walked away.

So when the Roche twins, in their black trunks, took their morning run on Bailey's Beach, ostensibly in innocent and harmless swim, with no other purpose than to enjoy the run and a dip, Mrs. Watts Sherman, if she was present, and Mrs. Watts Sherman's agents, if she was not, gathered the two Sherman girls under her chaperonage, as a hen gathereth her young under her wing, and the pale blue taffeta bathing suits with white braid trimmings, the blue silk hose and white canvas sandals of the Sherman twins, and the black trunks presently dotted opposite ends of the beach.

The strollers of the beach declare that sometimes a white shoe is removed from a rebellious foot and while the dismay watched for an indiscreet moment some disloyal sail, the waite also waves its signal to the banished twins in trunks.

Newport is becoming vastly interested in the pantomime. That part of Newport that understands the wigwag system says that when Miss Irene, who is the genius of the sisters waves the white sandal in a long ellipse it signifies "Stay away. Will see you at the Casino at noon."

When Miss Mildred, of more pungent temper, manipulates the sandal in brisk, vigorous circle, it signifies "Old cat watching. Be sure to drive this afternoon."

And the Roche twins, always amenable to the suggestions of the Sherman twins, vanish into the bathing houses. A few minutes later, decorously attired and manneered, they walk homeward. And Mrs. Aurel Batonyi watching from one end of the beach, and Mrs. Watts Sherman, of her eagle-eyed representative, making polite, but vigilant observation from the other, think their efforts, clever and unobserved they imagine—have been successful; that when their respective pair of twins ride forth that afternoon, attended by their respective grooms, their attention will be absorbed by their escort.

It had not occurred to Mrs. Batonyi, on the one side, that, "Those Sherman girls would be so designing as to ride out to meet the boys," nor to Mrs. Watts Sherman that, "Mrs. Batonyi's pestiferous twins would dare to meet my girls clandestinely."

There being a free masonry between the world and lovers, none of the hundreds who meet the twain twins riding slowly and soberly side by side, ever tell the respective mammas of this earnest quartette of the meetings. With a swish of the whips over their coiss, and a spurious smile at their companions, the wise actors of wise Newport allude to similar meeting of neighbors with Victoria Macdonald and her groom, and they predict that in which Victoria Mercedita's rides culminated, an elopement.

Those who had been too punished to notice before, observed the drift of the maternal currents of the match game between Edith Deacon and Julia Flag on one side, and the Sherman twins on the other. Mr. Watts Sherman watched the game from one side of the field, Mrs. Aurel Batonyi from the other. In the vicinity of Mrs. Batonyi hovered the bodies of the Roche twins, though their spirits were on the green, trembling on the rackets so deftly twirled by the slim white wrists of the Sherman twins.

When the game ceased suddenly, and the sward came ringing a cultivated, but angry-driven volee of protest from a group of players, it was noticed by all but the players and the embarrassed referee, that the Roche twins cleared half the green with a bound, and that Edmund Maurice Roche took his place beside Irene as naturally as steel turns to the magnet, and that simultaneously and for the same apparent reason, George Francis Roche stood, as a soldier at guard, at Mildred's elbow.

One of the young women on the other side had challenged the umpire's right to make certain rulings that seemed to favor the Sherman twins. Hot words passed, some of them words to which the twins had never before listened. Hearing these words they shrank and paled, and Mamma Batonyi and Mamma Sherman, at the same moment, saw the arm of the future Lord Fermoy slip for a moment around Irene Sherman's waist. It was only for an instant, but quite long enough to send each matron in stumbled search for her perfumed smelling salts.

It was early in the Newport season, before Cupid's mischief in that quarter had been wholly revealed that a self centred young hostess invited the Roche twins and the Sherman twins and their mammas to a dinner dance. When the two pairs of twins greeted each other the vain young hostess, elated by their warmth of greeting, was aglow with the consciousness of her success in bringing the right people together. Warn, however, the two mammas of the respective twain bowed frigidly to each other across the shoulders of their duplet offspring, the hostess grew cold with dread.

"Something is wrong. Something is certainly wrong," she whispered agonizedly to her spouse.

"Humph," reinarked that unsympathizing individual, "way don't you give me your lists to revise? Don't you know that Mrs. Watts Sherman has never forgiven Frances Work for her mesalliance? Mrs. Batonyi would like to shred Mrs. Watts' flesh from her bones if she dared for she overheard her say, 'Certainly, she's old enough to know better.' She would like to push her off the Cliff Walk."

"Hush! Hush! How coarse you are," and the poor little hostess' smile became fixed and frozen.

Every guest at that dinner declares it was dreadful. Mrs. Batonyi studiously avoided looking at Mrs. Watts Sherman. She gave no sign of her knowledge of her presence at the board except when somenne mentioned Mrs. Sherman's fad of household sanitation. The discussion had progressed to the point of wearing rubber gloves in handling household furniture and utensils.

A titter was heard far down the table. It was repeated. Everybody stopped talking. Everybody looked. The amused one was Mrs. Aurel Batonyi, who was ostentatiously changing the laughter into a cough, but was looking with cold, contemptuous eyes at Mrs. Watts Sherman. Mrs. Sherman flushed. Her lips parted. She was about to speak. She glanced at their hostess.

Although the butler was merely directing the serving of the dessert the hostess rose in consternation. It was the signal for retirement of the women to the drawing room.

Ms. Watts Sherman followed close upon her hostess, keeping wit-ful eyes upon the twins. Mrs. Batonyi, pale but with a gleam of satisfaction in her dark eyes, followed. Mrs. Sherman made her adieus early. When the last guest had early taken himself off the hostess sank upon the rug in violent hysteria.

Cupid, though his wings were adroop, and his plumage ruffled, was still god of his domain. He who had laughed at lockssmiths declared that all the clucking of all the alarmed mammas in the world should not foil his plans.

But society took alarm.

The conservatives led by Mrs. Watts Sherman added recruits. Mrs. Aurel Batonyi's small following fell away. The most courageous of the Newport colony had half made up its mind to overlook "Frances' foolish marriage, especially since she now regrets it and has dropped the fellow." But to offer an affront to Mrs. Watts Sherman and all that Mrs. Watts Sherman represented was unpardonable. There is a legend in Newport, "What's a husband among friends?" But a breach of etiquette at dinner that was the social sin beyond redemption.

Thus is Newport entertained day after day. Thus it watches the fray of the warring mamma's. Thus it lays gloves as a wager that young love will triumph over middle-aged prudence and prejudice, and no one can be found to take them.

"It is absurd, this prejudice that mamma has against Mrs. Batonyi," Miss Irene was heard by an eavesdripping wave to say.

"Of course," retorts Mildred. "Mrs. Batonyi has merely married to please herself instead of her family and friends, which is precisely what——"

"Hush!" Irene lays a warning finger on her sister's lips, and looks at the lingering wave.

"And at any rate Edmund is not to blame for his mother's choice of a second husband. Her first choice made her reckless."

"And George is not at all like his father. He would never, if we should separate, publish a warning to tradesmen against me."

"How dreadful! Of course we shall never be divorced!"

"I hope not, but I was merely considering a remote possibility. The boys would behave as gentlemen even though divorced."

"And Edmund is of most equable temper. Mamma need not fear that he will ever be as irascible as his grandfather."

"But, don't you think," persisted milder Irene, "don't you think we would better wait? You know mamma says the boys may be disinherited on account of their mother's second marriage."

"Tush! Mr. Frank Work adores the boys. He is only helping Mrs. Batonyi. Besides she has given up her whip."

"Mamma can never forget that she was once a Brown of Providence."

Irene's flagging courage is bolstered by the sturdier spirit of Mildred, as George Francis's is supported in his determination by the valiant Lord Fermoy.

And because of the two leading spirits of the Cupid's quartette, Newport, when it lies down to sleep in the early morning, cannot guess what news its valets and ladies' maids may bring with their coffee. But it hopes that if the mammas remain recalcitrant, the four lovers will take the matrimonial bit between their teeth. Newport, that has so long bargained in hearts, has a tender interest in these four, so young and so careless of mere material considerations.

That Mrs. Aurel Batonyi married out of and far beneath her class even the Sherman twins cannot deny. But the Sherman twins are not in a temper to consider class or caste.

And the Roche twins are of precisely the same mind and all Newport asks, "What will happen next?"

What the Men Think of Women's Looks.

MANY women plead guilty to dressing to please a man—to themselves, if not to the world at large. Woman wants man to admire her just the same.

Her clothes, from the crown of her head to the tips of her boots, are planned with this in view—to please the men. Perhaps it would be more accurate to reverse the order and to say from the tips of the boots to the crown of the head, for it is a fact that most men notice a woman's boots sooner than her headgear.

Men like little feet, but as all feet cannot be little they also admire well-shaped feet, and all feet can be well shaped.

A pretty foot is a well-dressed foot, and it is easy to dress a foot well. It is curious to see with what unsightly footwear some women provide themselves, when they could with the same outlay be so dainty shod.

Then there is something about the light colored boot that appeals to a man's sense of romance. It makes a woman more ethereal than the prosaic black shoe.

Men like dainty manicuring. They are exceedingly sensitive to the appearance of the fingers, and if a woman can present a really well kept pair of hands she has done a great deal in the battle for admiration.

Men like bare hands. There is something babyish about a pair of bare hands, all devoid of rings. The sight appeals to a man's chivalry.

Red hair is supposed to attract many men. Next to that they like jet-black tresses. The medium shades are less attractive, though gold colored hair is very acceptable to a man's sense of the beautiful.

Men like repuseful hands. They hate hands that twitch and play with this and with that. They like little childish hands, full of dimples, hands that like to lie in the lap and rest.

Men like nice hair-dressing. It is really the hair they notice, and not the style of the coiffure: it is the condition of the hair itself that they observe. Neglected looking hair they notice at once.

They like hair that shines, hair that is in place with each hair in studied repose. They like hair that looks as though it had been prettily arranged.

Red haired women are fortunate. Men admire them, so those who possess such tresses have no need to regret it, as one so often hears them doing. Men think that such hair is beautiful.

Men like red cheeks, and the red-cheeked woman has become fashionable. A doctor says that the way to get red cheeks is to pinch them with the finger tips until the blood comes to the surface.

Ask a man which of three women he admires most and he will unhesitatingly pick out the one who is trimmest as to boots and bindings; he admires the well-groomed woman. A man likes to see a well-hanging skirt, and he does not stop to ask whether the gown is a plain gingham or a costly silk. What he likes is the look of extreme neatness.

How To Live On 2 Cents A Day

Very Interesting Experiments to Show That a Little Rye Bread, Potatoes and Margarine (Without Tea, Coffee or Alcohol) Will Keep a Man Stronger and Healthier Than the Costliest Diet.

Dogs Used by Professor Chittenden, of Yale University, in Experiments Which Confirm Dr. Hindhede's Theories.

Pictures 1 and 2 (at the top) a Dog Who Gained Three Pounds on a Low Proteid Diet. 3 and 4, a Bull Terrier Who Regained His Strength. 5 and 6, a Half-Starved Dog Restored to Health.

GREAT interest has been excited in Denmark and other parts of Europe by the success of Dr. Hindhede's 2-cents-a-day diet.

Members of Dr. Hindhede's family and his many followers who are living upon his diet are said to be stronger, heavier, healthier and more cheerful than persons living on the most expensive and generous diet of the old type.

Thousands of people in Denmark are following Dr. Hindhede's principles, and are known as "Hindhedors." The system is being adopted quite extensively in Norway and Sweden, and also to a considerable extent in Germany, Holland and England.

The main principle in Dr. Hindhede's system, which is explained in a new pamphlet, is to avoid taking too much proteid in the diet. Proteid is the constituent of food that builds up muscle and tissue. It is present in large proportion in fine beef and the most expensive meat foods which have been regarded by ordinary unscientific persons as the most necessary constituent of food, and even larger proportion in certain vegetable foods, chiefly those of the bean family. Proteid was long regarded as the most necessary constituents of food, and even doctors and scientific men considered that a man could hardly eat too much of it. In recent years its importance has been vigorously attacked and most scientific experimenters in diet have come to the conclusion that a very moderate amount of proteid is desirable, although probably the majority of doctors are still unwilling to accept this view.

Dr. Hindhede has experimented for years on himself and his family, including his sons Jens and Christian, and his daughters, Anna and Karen. They show greater health and strength than the average well-to-do children of the same age.

Dr. Hindhede has drawn up a table which explains the nutritive value of various foods. This table shows that you get as much nutrition from one cent's worth of rye bread as from $1.25 worth of asparagus:

GROUP 1, cost of unit of food, from ½ to 1 cent: Potatoes, barley, buttermilk, rye bread, wheat bread, potato meal, oatmeal.

GROUP 2, cost 1 to 2 cents: Lard, sugar, margarine, milk in country, rice, pork, cabbage, carrots, kernels of nuts.

GROUP 3, cost 2 to 3 cents: Milk in cities, red cabbage, butter, pork chops, raisins, cheese, sausage.

GROUP 4, cost 3 to 4 cents: Dried apples, eels, fresh apples.

GROUP 5, cost 4 to 5 cents: Beer that is free from alcohol, celery, dried fish, eggs, string beans.

GROUP 6, cost 6 to 10 cents: Green peas, beef, fresh fish, red cabbage, spinach.

GROUP 7, cost 25c. to $1.25: Ordinary beef, strawberries, lettuce, asparagus, melon, port wine, claret.

GROUP 8, cost per unit of nutriment too expensive to be computed: Coffee, tea, whisky, tobacco.

GROUP 9, some few substances that are even more expensive, considering their lack of nutriment, as the ones mentioned under the preceding group, viz.: Nerve tonics and various so-called extracts.

To show how he himself has profited by frugal diet and rational living, the doctor states that he has undertaken cycling tours of over 40 miles and that he, without being at all trained as an athlete, never feels the least fatigue.

Hindhede is not an absolute vegetarian, but in his diet he reduces animal food to a minimum, to just a little pork at rare intervals, and to butter or lard. The healthiest food, as shown by his experiments, is bread, and butter is used by him to make it more palatable. Next in order come potatoes, fruit, cheese, and various cereals. Green vegetables in large quantities are considered by him unnecessary, particularly because of their expensiveness, and also because they contain proteid to a amount that with overindulgence must prove hurtful.

Beef is ceased by the doctor with coffee, tea and alcohol as almost a poison, and therefore to be shunned. To demonstrate how well his children like their home diet, he pictures their dread whenever visits to aunts and other relatives become necessary. These good ladies, of course, insist that the little dears are starved at home, and become highly indignant at the very fares their little gums make when they are asked to stuff themselves with steaks and chops.

Why, it may be asked, are not the children of the very poor families in the large European cities, where beef certainly is a rarity, healthier than those who get beef? Because, answers Dr. Hindhede, they are permitted to drink coffee and tea, frequently even alcoholic beverages, and because they pass their lives in poorly ventilated, stuffy rooms, away from air and sunshine. He also dwells upon the fact that breathing tobacco smoke and juvenile smoking prevent the development of the youth of every land in the manner that nature would make possible.

As additional proof of the correctness of his contention that little food, correctly chosen, is more beneficial than large meals of meat and dainties, the doctor cites the case of a young man of his personal acquaintance, who, without being either a drunkard or a rake, had become totally run down by the demands that his social position as the scion of one of the most prominent families in the Danish metropolis had made upon him.

The family physician advised the young man to get back to nature. He sent to live in the cottage of a forester, who was a disciple of Hindhede. Instead of dinners of many courses he had only bread and butter and coarse milk for breakfast, a dish of some cereal, potatoes and only at rarer intervals a bite of pork for lunch and pancakes, bread and milk for supper. Besides that four to five, as the meat diet requires, he was induced to work hard in the garden out doors, and within six weeks he had become a different being. His mother, upon first seeing him, joyfully kissed the hale and healthful looking cheeks he took to her breast.

Of course the Hindhede doctrine does not find common sense must do their share. We must live in the open. His advice is always strong with open windows. He states that repeatedly during the severe Danish winters he has had to shovel snow out of the children's bedrooms, and that nevertheless the youngsters never suffer from a cold, except when they perchance little, yellow, sick-feel people. "Men that are fed on meat can never fight," said this authority, and then advanced the theory that for every Russian in the field Japan would have to furnish three of its soldiers. The results, as the campaign progressed, showed the facts to be quite different from the forecast. The Japanese have, as Hindhede says in his book, conclusively proved that a nation may live on foodstuffs that contain very little proteid and that proteid nearly exclusively of vegetable origin for centuries, and yet enjoy remarkably sound bodies and minds.

The Danish doctor cites the experiments made in America by Prof. Chittenden and others with college students and United States soldiers, who were induced to place themselves on a diet very much Hindhedian. The boys of Uncle Sam instead of partaking of meat three times a day, as the army regulation provides, throve

These Diagrams Show the Relative Nutritive Value of the Principal Articles of Food.

Dr. Hindhede goes farther than any of the diet experimenters. He holds that an excess of proteid is a great injury to the system and that it is responsible for a great deal of the ill health from which people suffer. He only allows one-half an ounce of proteid daily. When it is remembered that half a pound of the finest lean beef contains two ounces of proteid, and that most of the other food eaten contains a large quantity of this substance, it will be appreciated that a man must take an exceedingly moderate amount of food in order to observe Dr. Hindhede's proteid limit. About one-eighth of a pound of beef would be all that he could permit himself, but, as a matter of fact, Dr. Hindhede advises the avoidance of beef altogether.

Next to consuming a limited quantity of proteid food, the most important rule in Dr. Hindhede's system is temperance in drinking. But temperance includes not only abstinence from alcoholic drinks, but from tea, coffee and nearly all beverages except water and those compounded from wholesome foodstuffs, such as cocoa, barley water, etc. He holds that temperance advocates are utterly mistaken in requiring abstinence from alcoholic drinks and permitting the diseased tools. Owing to the greater cost of living in America, the amount expended would have to be increased by at least 50 per cent, but whatever the increase, owing to local prices or the varying capacity of individuals to outlet, still the main advantages of Dr Hindhede's system resulting in decreased cost of living and better health would remain the same in any country. Actually he maintains that a man in Denmark can be strong and healthy on two cents a day of rye bread, potatoes and margarine.

The average daily expenditure per person of Dr. Hindhede for himself and family amounts to four cents a day. He gives the following table analyzing his expenditure:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 2 lbs. | Potatoes | 1 1-4 cents |
| 5 oz. | Barley | 2 cent |
| 4 oz. | Buttermilk | 2 cent |
| 7 oz. | Rye Bread | 3 cent |
| 1 oz. | Margarine | 2 cent |
| 1 oz. | Pork | 2 cent |
| 2 lbs. | | 4 cents |

8. If you must drink coffee or tea, don't have it strong, and buy small cups, which may be filled not more than once a day at the utmost.

9. Don't change night into day and day into night, for the old proverb, "Early to bed and early to rise makes a man strong, healthy and wise," is to-day as true as it ever was.

The doctor expressly states that he has purposely refrained from furnishing menus, preferring that each one shall shape his diet after his individual taste, but according to the general idea propounded in the treatise. He does say, however, that it is very possible that, with the assistance of Mrs. Hindhede, he at some future time may venture upon the publication of a veritable safe and sane cook book.

Professor Russell Chittenden, of Yale University, has just made a series of experiments on dogs reported in his very interesting new work, "The Nutrition of Man" (Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York), which agree largely with the facts observed by Dr. Hindhede. By experiments on six dogs Professor Chittenden found that their strength and weight were increased by a diet containing far less meat or proteid than was commonly considered necessary.

THE AMAZING COURTSHIP OF THE DUC DE CHAULNES

Rebuffed Again and Again by Papa Shonts, This Wonderful "Johnny Jump-up" Nobleman Pursues His Beautiful Heiress Over Oceans and Continents and Now Every One Believes He Is Going to Win Her.

NEVER has a more peculiar pursuit of an American heiress by a foreign nobleman been chronicled than that of Miss Theodora Shonts by the Duc de Chaulnes.

Twelve times has the existence of an engagement been denied by some member of the Shonts family, and twelve times has it been affirmed by the Duke or his friends.

It is a great conflict between American common sense and the glamor of foreign titles. Mr. Shonts, who is as hard hearted as an American railroad magnate ought to be, says that his daughter has too much American horse sense to marry a Duke; that it is nonsense to think of such a thing, and that there is no place like home. Miss Shonts and her mother, on the other hand, are evidently attracted by the Duke's titles, his chateaux, his family ghosts, the dubious but picturesque deeds of his ancestors, his own personality, his beguiling foreign manners and other considerations of a like character.

The Duke seems certain of success, confiding, perhaps, in a report which has reached Europe that Miss America always has her own way. The best informed observers think he is justified in his confidence.

A brief diary of events in this amazing courtship will illustrate how the Duke's chances of winning the heiress have soared from day to day:

The Diary of the Courtship.

November 27, 1906.—It is formally announced in Paris that a marriage has been planned between the Duc de Chaulnes et de Picquigny and Miss Theodora Shonts, younger daughter of Theodore P. Shonts, chairman of the Panama Canal Commission.

The Duke's family furnish some interesting details concerning him. His full name is Emmanuel Theodore Bernard Marie d'Albert de Luynes d'Ailly. He is ninth Duc de Chaulnes et de Picquigny and a first cousin of the Duc de Luynes, the head of the house, which is one of the most prominent families in France. The Chaulnes title was created in 1621 and was revived in 1869 in favor of the Duke's father, who was a brother of the Duc de Luynes and a great favorite of Napoleon III. The lighter forms of dramatic art more assiduously and conspicuously than is consistent with the dignity of a noble duke. And he had very bad luck with the horses.

One American girl has had an experience with the Duke that should be a warning to other girls. He was formerly engaged to Miss Eva Gebhard, daughter of William Gebhard, of the well-known New York family. She was forced to break off her engagement when he flaunted himself before her mother and her family in brazen society. The Duke then exhibited his heartless cynicism by snapping his fingers and declaring that he would find another American heiress ten times as rich.

November 29.—"Not guilty," declares Miss Theodora Shonts, when asked to confirm the report that she is to marry the Duc de Chaulnes.

"I know the Duke very well," explains Miss Shonts, apparently anxious to correct any impression that she does not think highly of the nobleman. "We became acquainted at Dinard and are very good friends, but we are not engaged."

November 30.—"I certainly understood that I was engaged to Miss Shonts," explains the Duke to a correspondent in Paris. "My sisters arranged it for me. They know all about it."

The Duke conveys a cheerful impression that he is quite confident of the outcome.

December 3.—"My daughter engaged to a Duke?" exclaims the Hon. Theodore P. Shonts on his return from Panama to New York to take charge of the Interborough system.

"No, sir, not on your life. My daughter is an American girl with good American horse sense. American boys are good enough for me—American boys with American force and American industry and no foolish foreign ways."

March 11, 1907.—The Duc de Chaulnes arrived in New York to pursue his courtship of Miss Shonts. His friend the Baron Chatesu de Dampierre, one of the historic d'Azes explains to fellow passengers on the steamer that the Duke is madly, wildly in love and is likely to come romantically in love with Miss Shonts.

"Ah! if that Miss Shonts knows how the Duke is going to marry her she will be happy," exclaims the confiding friend in absolutely the head of the French Baron, clasping his hands and turning his aristocracy, and another sister is married eyes up to the sky. "He is dying of love to the Duc de Brissac, who is only second love. He carries her photograph everywhere. He kisses it in the streets, in importance.

November 28.—The newspapers furnish at the race course. He cannot a lot of information about the Duc de restrain his emotion. Why, he jumps Chaulnes not volunteered by his family, on the table at the Cercle—the club—and He has dissipated his patrimony with tells the whole nobility of France that Miss amazing swiftness. lady in the world and that he will kill any one who denies it. Ah! the Duke is not an ordinary man, he is the flower of chivalry, a knight errant!"

March 18.—"Will you be my bridesmaid?" asks Miss Theodora Shonts of a girl friend in Washington, who not only accepts eagerly, but quickly communicates the news to the papers.

Society confidently expects that the wedding will take place soon. The Duke is seen constantly in the society of Miss Shonts, and both look very happy. Mrs. Shonts also looks pleased.

"They are engaged," say the gossips. "They have been engaged all along, but why don't they admit it?"

March 25.—The Duke and Miss Shonts, while scorching in an auto near Glen Echo, Md., are fired upon by the notorious Marshal Collins, terror of scorchers, but escape.

The same day the Duke chatting with a reporter explains that American society women are less interesting and well dressed than French women of the same class, and that they wear too many jewels in the daytime. The Duke smilingly declines to discuss his engagement.

March 26.—It is now absolutely certain that there is no engagement between the Duc de Chaulnes and Miss Shonts. Papa Shonts has let the cat out of the bag. "The Duke wants to marry Theodora," says Mr. Shonts with a snap of his square jaws, "but I won't stand for it."

The fact is that Miss Theodora and her mother and the Duke are all of one mind about the marriage, and only Mr. Shonts is against it. It was Mrs. Shonts who originally insisted on giving her daughters a European training, which culminated in their reception by King Edward and a brilliant career in the highest social circles of England and France. The natural climax of such a career is to marry a duke.

Mr. Shonts, who made his millions in American railroads, was always of the opinion that America was good enough for those who made their money there. The idea of marrying an idle foreigner he regards as preposterous. He has studied the details of the Castellane divorce case with care and he has declared that he will be many times astonished before he will permit a daughter of his to be married to a foreign nobleman.

"No, sir; you can't have my daughter," says Mr. Shonts to the Duc de Chaulnes, in his sternest manner.

April 18.—Society is surprised to find that the prospect of an engagement is not at an end, after all.

Everywhere at Miss Shonts goes, the Duke is sure to follow. She and her family move from Washington to the Hotel St. Regis, New York, one morning, and the same afternoon in trots the smiling Duke. He and his supposed fiancee go driving and in the evening he dines at the hotel. They behave just like an engaged couple.

April 25.—There is not exactly an engagement, it is said, but Mr. Shonts has reached the point of discussing the subject with the Duke. Mr. Shonts asks him what his means are, how he proposes to support his daughter, and what work he expects to do. He does not offer him a position in the New York Subway.

The Duke in reply calmly mentions the annual income, a very large one, which he will expect Mr. Shonts to settle on his daughter. This decides Mr. Shonts more than ever against foreign noblemen.

"I will give my daughter a substantial check at her wedding," he says, "but no settlement or annual income. You will have to provide the income yourself and prove to me that you have got it."

May 7.—The Duc de Chaulnes has returned to France without a bride, but his friends explain that his proposed engagement to Miss Shonts is by no means at an end.

"Miss Shonts will arrive here very soon," they say, with knowing smiles, "and the Duke will arrange everything satisfactorily during the Summer."

May 23.—Miss Shonts and her mother arrive in France and the Duke is there to meet them. Everybody is sure that they are engaged.

May 30.—It is announced by a newspaper very well-informed in social matters that a wedding will take place between Miss Shonts and the Duke toward the end of June. Miss Shonts is seen to be busily engaged in preparing her trousseau.

June 20.—Miss Shonts and the Duke are not married at the time before mentioned, but the correspondent who received the original announcement from the Duke himself now states that Mr. Shonts has given a conditional consent to the marriage.

July 2.—"I have given no consent, conditional or otherwise," declares Mr. Shonts, in New York, in reply to an inquiry.

August 10.—The Duc de Chaulnes remains in constant attendance on Miss Shonts up to the time of her leaving France. His courtship is a model of tenderness, devotion and grace, and everybody agrees that no American heiress could be blamed for accepting such an ornament of the aristocracy.

August 20.—Mr. Shonts issues one of his periodical denials that his daughter is engaged.

Sept. 1.—Miss Shonts has returned to Washington with one of the most glorious trousseaus ever created for a fortunate bride. It is announced positively that the wedding of Miss Shonts and the Duke will take place during Christmas week next, whatever Mr. Shonts may say.

Sept. 16.—The Duc de Chaulnes arrives in New York under an assumed name, but is quickly recognized. Strange to say, his first act is to visit the Shonts family.

Sept. 18.—Mr. Shonts announces that his daughter is not engaged.

Sept. 19.—Mrs. Shonts declares to a New York American reporter that she thoroughly approves of the Duke and that the majority of international marriages, in her observation, have turned out happily.

While she makes these significant remarks, Mr. Shonts kicks the Duke coldly and declares she ought to come for an automobile ride.

The Girl Who Expects Too Much.

THE habit of expecting men to spend money on them keeps the girls from a good deal of attention that they might otherwise receive. Of course, when a man become interested in a girl he naturally expects to give her any little treats that he can afford; but when he finds out how much is expected of him he is frightened away.

No man is pleased by the thought that a girl only likes him for what he gives her.

There is another side to it also. When you find a man of moderate circumstances showering gifts on a girl you may be sure he is provident.

A great many young men have to help with the home expenses, and all of them who are ambitious are trying to save a little money.

When a man falls in love with you wouldn't you rather that he should save all he can, with a view to marrying soon, than fritter his money away on theatres, etc.?

Most girls consider an engagement ring absolutely necessary, and, if the man can afford it, it is nice to have this souvenir of the happiest hour of your life; but when you love each other what difference does a trifle like a ring make?

There are so many ways to be happy without spending money when two people really care for each other.

Tucked away in the depths of every girl's heart is the thought that some day she will marry the man of her choice and live happy ever after. There is nothing to be ashamed of in this—a woman's thoughts turn to love and marriage as naturally as a flower to the sun.

In marrying a man it is not alone his love you accept; you are in debt to him in most cases for your actual support. The only way in which you can repay this obligation is by making him a good wife.

The woman who is a good wife and mother is filling the highest vocation that is granted to woman. There is no career equal to it. We do best that which we are most naturally fitted for, and every true woman should be at her best when fulfilling the duties of wife and mother.

The good wife should be her husband's comfort, strengthening him when he is weak, softening him when he is hard, walking proudly by him in success, giving him tenderest love and sympathy in adversity. She should spend his money wisely, remembering that every penny represents work and thought on his part.

His good name she should hold more precious than gold. Many a man has lost heart and courage simply because he could not keep pace with the demands of his wife.

He loves her, and wants her to have as many pretty clothes and comforts as she has been accustomed to, and that is the beginning of the trouble. Try to remember, that if you wish to help your husbands to success you must be content with small beginnings.

You can either be the guiding star and helpmate of a man's life, or you can be a clog and drawback, dragging him to failure. So when you are building your castles in the air add a practical touch to your day-dreams by asking yourselves, "How am I preparing myself for this happy dream, should it come true? Am I training myself to fit this vocation properly, or am I just frittering away my time—an idle butterfly, with no practical attainments?" If you want to make good wives you must know something about the practical side of life.

The Dangers of Dust.

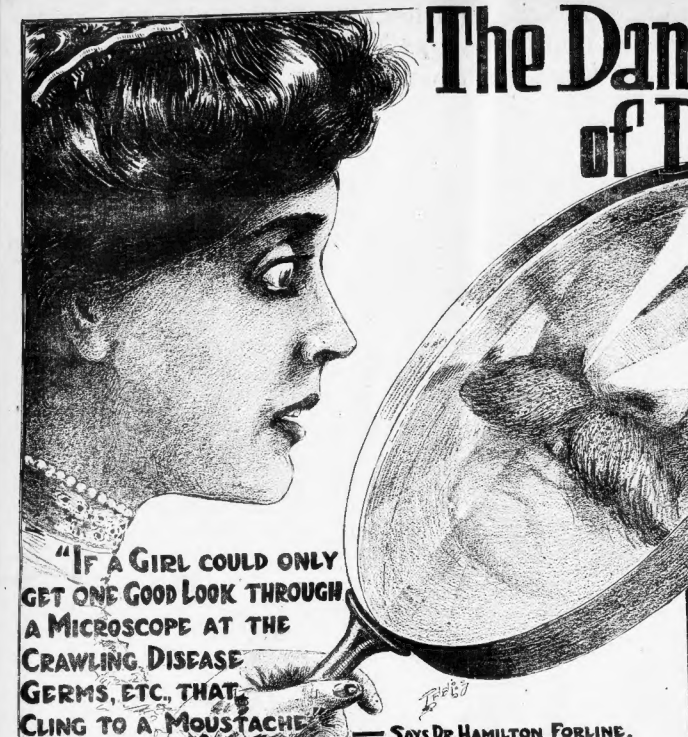
How Dust Kills Babies, Makes Children Sick, Scratches Little Doors In Your Lungs for Disease Microbes to Walk Into You, Makes Sore Throat, Gives You a Cold and Leaves You An Easy Victim for Pneumonia and Consumption.



"IF A GIRL COULD ONLY GET ONE GOOD LOOK THROUGH A MICROSCOPE AT THE CRAWLING DISEASE GERMS, ETC., THAT CLING TO A MOUSTACHE"

— SAYS DR. HAMILTON FORLINE.

Remarkable Scientific Experiments Show How Much Safer it Is to Kiss a Man Who Has Neither Moustache Nor Beard.

A KISS with its accurately volume-registered shock of electricity is a fine thing when today sees it smoothly wheel and come from the living room of yesterday when and some from the living entrance — into the dining room. Furniture and all is moved about with a broom and dusted. And this is repeated and repeated. At the end of this task, which was performed with a certain amount of energy, the air is heavy—at least you think it is—with dust and a great many kinds of germs.

That dust is the most dangerous thing in our living room cannot be denied. Dust kills babies, makes children sick, scratches little doors in your lungs for disease microbes to walk into you, makes sore throat, gives you a cold and leaves you an easy victim for pneumonia and consumption.

Dr. T. M. Prudden, in New York and in other cities have filtered dust from the air in a room for a week or more and on the dust particles under high power microscopes have found the germs of consumption, pneumonia, lockjaw, blood poisoning and other diseases.

Every breath we take will contain a number of these germs, and will carry them into the lungs, and will be breathed the moment of the lungs.

Dr. Prudden has made estimates of the number of germs that are inhaled with each breath we take. He says that in a single breath we take in a thousand germs at once. But at the same time we breathe out a thousand germs, so that we are not actually adding to the germs in the lungs. But they gradually relieve the lungs of their germs.

These germs find their way into the lungs in many ways. Whether we breathe through the mouth or through the nose, they are carried in on the air we breathe. Germs are carried in on food and in drink. Germs are carried in on many other ways. But the most important defence is put up by the nose. The nose is one of the most wonderful parts of the body. The President's nose. That nose is a perfect air filter. As Professor Soper, of Yale, has shown, the nose is a perfect air filter. As Professor Soper, of Yale, has shown, the nose is a perfect air filter. At all points science lays a good word for dust, not the artificial kind made by the dust of civilization, which sets up a vehicle for bacteria in their travels, but for the unbreathed dust from the processes of nature. This dust finds its way high in the air, comes from the dissolution of water vapor and settles with them. If the temperature is cool and the moisture is sufficient substances in the air, the moisture of water gets in contact with others closely in the earth. When there are enough of them they interfere with the passage of sunlight and we call it cloudy.

If the moisture collecting process continues the drops begin to fall to fill the form of the rain, and the dust is carried down with them. The "dust of the mountains are always in a draft from the ocean going in and out of the mouth and nose. Dr. Prudden has made an excellent estimate of the number of germs that fall on the dust and microbes that are carried down with the rain. He has found that in the rain, the bacteria seems to keep in water and water, and that the bacteria are carried down with the rain. The germs are carried down with the rain. The germs are carried down with the rain. The germs are carried down with the rain.

What Is Beauty?

One sees beauty only in the creamy cheek and golden hair of the sparkling blonde. Another finds her embodied in her of the rose-red lips and hair like the raven's wing. The Hottentot finds beauty where there is most of woolridupois. But no does the Eskimo. And she of Paris or New York would starve herself close to death's door before she would add one pound to detract ever so little from a single line of grace.

Then what is beauty, anyway?

This is the question that is interesting the artists, the authors, the physicians, and even the clergy, all over Europe. The English have rallied nobly to the defense of their dear, awkward, round-shouldered maidens, and the French protest at the very idea of granting the palm to such mediocrity so long as the chic Parisienne poses herself with such exquisite taste, and displays such animation. But they both unite heartily to deny any right of consideration to La Belle Americaine who combines the English girl's fresh coloring with the grace of her cousin across the Channel.

And it is quite interesting to read some of the expert opinions on the subject, one of the most striking of which is from Dr. Emil Reich, the great authority, whose sermons and lectures on women's problems have made him almost as well known here as in Europe.

Beauty and Nationality.

By DR. EMIL REICH.
Author and Lecturer.

YOUR ringmaster looks at effects to look down upon beauty. He thinks he says he thinks better still he does that he thinks that a race's value is its character. Its artistic power.

I do not admit this dogma that I only contend that where there is real character real grit and real will power there is also beauty, and therefore where artistic talents and genius the sterling power of a race.

Flashy nations like the Italian, Hungarian, have flashy features. Their heads come infinite themselves—low, receding and sunk. The neck disappears—the jaws have "character."

Energetic nations are rich in more energy into outward results. I for one would not hesitate to assert that the form and general appearance of a given class of a race, according to the law of their spines out.

Take in country—for example in England where women are not taken with suffrage movements, where they are not but a subservient race—their backs are straight down to the hips.

The American woman, free of the consciousness of her sex, and often much more so than the Frenchwoman have hands swung in a proudly undulating line.

The women of such nations as the Russians, Roumanians, Hungarians have fine hands, but bad feet. The energetic, hard working Frenchwoman has coarse feet and bony hands.

Beauty is one of the greatest assets of a nation. In ranking nations men are more beautiful than women, in rating ones women excel men.

An American beauty is indeed striking but more to-day than to-morrow, more to-morrow than at the end of three days.

As is the beauty of a nation, so is the nation as a whole. Each period of a nation's history has its own type of beauty. Good ones are greater types of beauty in and come from the provinces. That was not so in the eighteenth century.

If people fully grasped the value of beauty as a force in national life they would be more anxious to carry it into art, conversation, manners, houses, meals and all the other aspects of life.

Only nations have no chance of being remembered by posterity, and international likes and dislikes are not a little influenced by the suave goddess who gives point to wit beauty to the body, grace to truth, and conquering charm to nations.

Beauty and Birth.

By JOHN STRANGE WINTER.
English Novelist.

I ADMIT there are practically no beautiful women in the East End; but what of the better-class women born and bred in the West End?

I can go out into the West End streets and point out dozens of young women infinitely more beautiful than any American girl.

There is no beauty in the white world which is equal to that of an English woman. She may not have the acquired "chic" of the American, but she possesses an indefinable loveliness which is her birthright and cannot be acquired.

I have made a curious discovery in my study of English beauty. It is that a complexion—a complexion of clear white and rose-pink, which compels admiration, is almost always the possession of a black haired person with a red- or auburn-haired person invariably produces beautiful children.

A girl with such parents is almost always the possessor of a curiously beautiful complexion.

American Beauties Fade.

By ELLA HEPWORTH DIXON.
Traveller and Journalist.

WHEN we set out to argue about the relative beauty of the women of two nations I take it that the standard of comparison is the upper classes of the two countries.

For beauty requires, as a luxurious diet, endless care in a favorable and not too dry climate. And no women more, however beautiful they may be in the west in and young, all women could reach the perfection of complexion of hands, feet and figure which we expect from our highly bred women of rank.

The chief and most striking difference is the preeminentness of American beauty and the startling power to look for the more solid and lovelier of our English women.

"THE CHILD of CRIME and ABSINTHE"

And How Paris Threatens to Wipe Out the Dread "Apaches" by Force of Arms, and the Fallieres' Government May Fall.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—[Exclusive Correspondence.]—Paris is in a panic. Within the last few days a number of the most desperate criminals in the entire world has created for itself a reign of terror. Not that by this I mean to say that the Parisians are afraid to go out on the streets after dark, or that they are afraid to walk unaccompanied through the deserted parts of the city. What I do mean to say is that the Apache Society, as the criminal organization is called, has become so powerful that it threatens to overthrow the Government.

What is the Apache? He is a criminal who has combined to rid from crime like a grain of fecula the world of all the moral restraints which society has established for its own protection. He is a criminal who has combined with his companions to rob and murder without fear of punishment. He is a criminal who has organized himself into a band of cutthroats, thieves and murderers, and who defies the police of Paris to capture him. He is a criminal who has established a reign of terror in the French capital, and who threatens to overthrow the Government unless it accedes to his demands.

Such is the Apache. He is the child of the most terrible social conditions that the world has ever known. He is the child of crime and absinthe. He is a product of the slums of Paris. He is a criminal by inheritance and by education. He is a criminal because he has been compelled to be one in order to live. He is a criminal because he has been driven to crime by poverty, by starvation, by the refusal of honest employment, by the persecution of the police, by the hatred of society, by the contempt of his fellow men. He is a criminal because he has been forced to be one by the conditions of life which surround him from his birth.

Not a respectable person in Paris but is afraid of the Apache. He is a terror to the timid shopkeeper, to the peaceful citizen, to the well-to-do bourgeois, to the rich boulevardier. He is a terror to the police themselves. He is a terror to the Government. He is a terror to the President of the Republic. He is a terror to the Ministry of Justice. # THE EVIL EYE

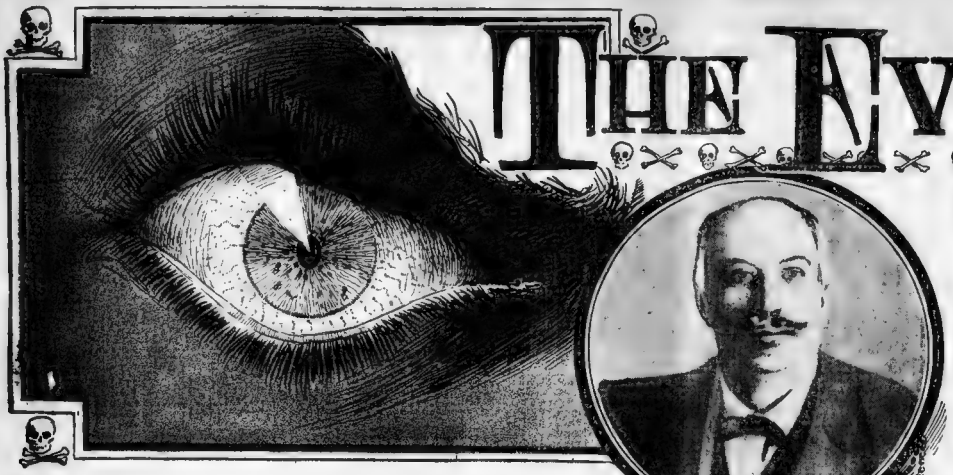
How That Weird Italian Superstition Immortalized in Theophile Gautier's Powerful Tale, "Jettatura," Holds Premier Giolitti's "Evil Eye" Responsible for Misfortune and Death to Sixteen Members of His Several Cabinets.



Giovanni Giolitti

NEARLY all Italians believe in the peculiar among his associates as described [illegible] This page.

"evil eye"; possessed consciously or unconsciously by certain individuals and its power to bring misfortune, even death, to those upon whom its baleful glance falls.

In Naples, where color, dress and other stars of the grand opera to make that superstition a disturbing influence, ers pose behind the scenes of the Metropolitan Opera House—this belief in the evil eye amounts to an obsession.

Naples is the scene of that classic by Theophile Gautier called "Jettatura," translated "The Evil Eye." The following scenes taken from that powerful tale do not, we appreciate the impatience of the [illegible] reserve with [illegible] Neapolitan.

Paul d'Aspremont is betrothed to the beautiful Italian Alicia Ward. [illegible] Count d'Altavilla, who says that she is betrothed [illegible] Paul d'Aspremont [illegible] estimable and [illegible] young man, does not at first realize that he possesses the "evil [illegible] prepared to render [illegible] and when [illegible]

I am distressed [illegible] but I [illegible] be off [illegible] make [illegible] Your [illegible] a prejudice."

At these words a [illegible] hinge spread [illegible] Paul's countenance [illegible] a look of [illegible] even his [illegible] brows drew [illegible] has formed [illegible] agent while his eyes [illegible] darted forth flashes [illegible] of lightning, as [illegible] itself [illegible] he [illegible] was [illegible] he [illegible] was so [illegible] the Count d'Altavilla, brave [illegible] though [illegible] of the Italian [illegible] and did [illegible] very brought [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] Don Felipe d'Avalla, forbid [illegible] call upon Miss Ward again."

"Come, I hereby warn you that I will call on Miss Ward the moment you have taken your departure

WHEN they were not resting on something, a peculiar meanness and languid look was depicted in the gleaming orbs; if they fixed themselves on any one the evebrows immediately contracted and frowned until they formed a perpendicular wrinkle in the forehead, from a pale gray the pupils would turn green, tinged with little black spots and streaked with yellow, the glance they emitted was sharp, almost painful, then, suddenly, everything acquired its former placidity.

Paul took an ice in the Cafe de Florope; a number of persons around him attentively and then changed their seats, nodding their heads in a knowing manner.

He entered the theatre of Palcinella, where they were giving a farce da ridere. The principal actor forgot his lines, after a moment's hesitation, however, he went on with his part; but in the last act of the pantomime his fuse once fell off, and when he attempted to apologize and explain the cause of his misfortune, his tongue suddenly refused to move, as Paul's eyes fastened themselves upon his and deprived him of the power of speech.

Those who were seated near Paul rose in a body and changed their seats. M. d'Aspremont rose to go; without, however, [illegible] the strange effect his presence had produced; while in the lobby he heard the spectators whisper to one another as he passed by—

"A Jettatore! A jettatore"

Valetta defines the jettatura, explaining how it can be identified by certain marks and by what means one can protect himself against its fatal influence.

If he had picked this book up in Paris, d'Aspremont would merely have guessed over it in that careless manner with which one fumbles the leaves of an old almanac; but in his present frame of mind, agitated as he was by a number of curious incidents, he read the book over with a feeling of horror. He was now fully aware of the fatal power he possessed—he was a Jettatore! He was obliged to acknowledge it, for he had every reason and mark by which Valetta pictures them.

As he stood there before the mirror, the three of his eyeballs wriggled like so many vipers; his eyebrows quivered like the bow which had just shot forth the poisoned arrow.

Paul realized that he was a fiend in human form! Although with noble and affectionate instincts, he carried misfortune wherever he went; his lovely glance, charged with venom, brought suffering and misery to those on whom it rested.

"But if I confided my fears to Alicia, she would simply laugh at me, and the climate is favorable to her health. Her health? Why, she was strong and healthy when I first met her. And yet before my very eyes, I have seen her growing thinner and thinner every day! How her bright eyes became dimmed in my presence, and her shapely hand has fallen away at my touch."

"Oh, uncle, if you take sides with Mr. d'Altavilla I shall have to acknowledge myself defeated," exclaimed Miss Ward.

"But will you please inform me what power the pair of horns you so kindly sent me have to divert the fatal effects of the fascino, or jettatura, as you call it?"

"On the same principle that the point of the scarlet coral affords to the lightning," answered Altavilla. The sharp points of the horns on which the jettatore fixes his eyes will divert the fatal fluid. An outstretched hand or a bunch of coral charms has the same effect."

"Ah, this is very stupid, Monsieur le Comte," remarked Miss Ward. "You evidently desire to impress me with the idea that I am under the influence of some dangerous fascino or jettatura and you have sent me the horns in order to divert it, is it not so?"

"I fear you have guessed the truth, Miss Alicia," replied the Count, earnestly, "of whom are you suspicious?"

"I am not at liberty to say, Miss Ward, I am positive of what I assert," replied the young Neapolitan.

"Do you refuse to tell me the name of this fatal bond, cried Miss Ward, rather sarcastically.

But d'Altavilla was silent.

"It is always well to know whom to guard against," added the Count slyly.

The young comte reflected for a moment, then arose, and approaching the count, he bowed politely and said,

"Milord Ward, I have the honor to ask the hand of your niece."

At this unexpected request Alicia blushed to the roots of her dark hair and from red she turned pale as white.

"It is [illegible] you do not care to [illegible] me," replied d'Altavilla, [illegible] husband in so he the right to [illegible] You [illegible] your time to make [illegible] I can afford to wait a few days for your answer, and, until then, the horns, if properly exposed, will protect you against all fatal influences."

And with a profound bow, the Count took his departure.

Here is my friend's request, Paul," said Alicia, pointing to a chain of picturesque rocks, piers of black and dingy mass of orange and purple leaves.

Paul sat himself on one of the rocks, and pointing to the stone-covered earth, requested Paul to kneel there at her feet.

"Now, place your two hands in mine and look me straight in the face. In a month's time I will be your wife. Why do your eyes avoid mine?"

At this moment Paul, whose mind was again filled with thought of the jettatura, turned his head aside.

"Gaze into my eyes, Paul, I command you, do not turn away your glance, or I shall begin to believe that a gentleman whom I should fear no one but a coward is afraid of a vile superstition. Now turn your eyes upon me and judge for yourself whether I am pretty enough to take for a drive in an open carriage in Hyde Park after we are married."

Paul, carried away by her coquettish [illegible] fixed his eyes upon Alicia's [illegible] and [illegible] fear no one but a coward is afraid of a vile superstition. Now turn your eyes upon me and judge for yourself whether I am pretty enough to take for a drive in an open carriage in Hyde Park after we are married."

Paul, carried away by her coquettish [illegible] fixed his eyes upon Alicia's [illegible] and did [illegible] very brought [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] Don Felipe d'Avalla, forbid [illegible] call upon Miss Ward again."

"Come, I hereby warn you that I will call on Miss Ward the moment you have taken your departure

The movement made by Alicia to conceal her handkerchief was not quick enough, however, to escape M. d'Aspremont's notice. A frightful, pallor spread over [illegible] face, [illegible] caused an irrefutable proof of the fatal power, and all sorts of strange ideas [illegible] flitted through his mind. Was it not his duty to put a stop to such a [illegible] malefaction that [illegible] so much misery

"Then you really wish your niece to [illegible] the hand of the [illegible] Count?" he asked d'Altavilla, in a low tone.

"Decidedly I do," answered the Count, exclaimed the Comte [illegible] arranging [illegible] his chair and hunting [illegible] the [illegible] covered tube of the hookah. "Is she, the dangerously ill?"

"Don't alarm yourself, milord," said Alicia may live, and a very long time at that.

"But on one condition," added the Count d'Altavilla "and that is that she never again sees eyes on M. Paul d'Aspremont."

What can I do? She love Paul.

Kindly give me the right to act as I see fit in this matter.

You are a terrible man, Count. Very well; you have my permission to do as you see fit. Try to save Alicia that is all I ask of you.

When the Neapolitan appeared on the threshold of the door, M. d'Aspremont waited patiently with his eyes fixed on the visitor.

"Monsieur," began the Comte [illegible] played with the charms on his watch chain, "what I have to say is no straightforward, and so unbecoming that you have the right to throw me out of the window. I trust, however, you will spare me this brutal treatment, as I am

Or the Parmenter Millions.

A Stirring Novel of Love, Conspiracy and Thrilling Adventure.

Copyright, 1907, by Arthur W. Marchmont.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

Miss Parmenter, heiress to Gregory Parmenter's millions, is engaged to the future Lord Ingborough, at Oxfordshire, England. Her father, after receiving a mysterious cablegram from America, insists that the marriage be hastened. No objection is made by Lord Ingborough when told that Miss Parmenter's father is reported by her husband, Lord Ingborough. The wedding is interrupted dramatically by a strange woman in black, who cries: "I forbid the banns!" Old Mr. Parmenter falls dead from the shock and it is later discovered that his will has been stolen, thus leaving Olive penniless. The woman in black substantiates her claim to be the wife of Gregory Parmenter and with her son, Gilbert Merridew, takes possession of the Gregory estate. Merridew calls on Mr. Parmenter's old lawyer, Mr. Chamberlain, and suspects Meredew of having stolen the will.

Olive writes to her lover saying that they must meet again, but he secures an interview in Mr. Chamberlain's office in which he plainly warns her to marry him in spite of all. Finally she agrees to come to him when the mystery is cleared up, and starts on a journey of investigation. On the train she is attacked and robbed by a man disguised as a woman, and only by a ruse prevents him from throwing all of their overcoats overboard. She then falls into the hands of Mrs. Merridew, who persuades her to go to Paris, but near the Belgian frontier Olive once more successfully escapes Merridew and Mrs. Grimston. Arriving in Paris, Olive meets Peyrol, who takes her to some rooms and tells her that she is safe in the hands of her cousin, Karl Hartmann, who is in the employ of her father. Olive refuses to have him interfere on behalf of a girl in the streets of London—Selina Hammond—and tells her that she is safe in the hands of her cousin. Karl, however, has other plans in view for Olive. He falls in love with her, but Olive declines. From Selina Hammond, who is to Merridew's employ, she learns that he is the head of a desperate band of criminals, and wins the band herself to earn him. Karl, one of the band, falls in love with her at first sight. She hears vaguely of a certain woman high in the councils of the band.

"You" make me long to see her, Karl." This was true enough; and although there were many other questions she would have liked to ask about Madame, Olive deemed it best to restrain her curiosity.

In the night she pondered all the strange information she had gained, especially in regard to Merridew. If Karl Hartmann was right Merridew was seeking his life in keeping secret his possession of her father's fortune. Already she knew enough to put him in her power. But how to use the knowledge to drag from him the secret that was all in all to her? She must wait for the right moment, and in the meantime she must be on the lookout for the opportunity that they would offer. Then she would strike—but not until the knowledge encouraged and nerved her for the step.

With Mrs Grimston shrew as she was—Olive speedily became a favorite. Quick to observe what the housekeeper wanted she was generally able to anticipate her wishes and to interpret her most extraordinary orders correctly.

"I wish they were all Germans, like you, Schmidt," she said more than once. "You are about the only creature in the place, except myself, with anything like a head on your shoulders; and heaven knows we want something like intelligence in a body nowadays. I'm sure I don't know what servants are coming to. I was almost afraid to take you, for we do hear such dreadful things about what some of you foreigners do. But you're not bad, you know, and sometimes I'm almost glad I've you come. You can consider yourself permanent, if agreed, even if the rest has to be turned away. And in this style one rattled on at great length and inconsequence.

This was when granting Olive a permit to be allowed to go out on the following afternoon. Jack had been back for some days and she was anxious to see him and wrote him to meet her at the Rotonde.

As soon as she was well away from the big house she jumped into a cab and drove to the house where her clothes were, changed into Olive Parmenter once more, and hurried to Chelsea.

When Jack arrived, he was eager to learn what she had been doing in his absence. He had called for her immediately on his return, and had been told that she had gone and that the Robsons did not know her address.

"I have been finding out things, Jack, but you mustn't ask me for particulars at present. I have found out for myself, however, that Selina Hammond was quite right when she said that mischief was brewing for you."

"All right," he laughed easily. "But I suppose you'll admit that I can take care of myself now."

Against any open attack, yes, of course; of course fall. But I am very set on."

"How did you learn it?"

"That for the moment I can't tell you."

"Do you mean you are running the risk of getting in with these people? My dear girl, think of the danger, the madness of such a thing."

"I am in no danger, Jack, but if I were, it would make no difference to me. I can't stop to think of danger. I have found out a great deal more than I have yet told you, and I mean to go through to the end."

"But how does this affect your matters—Gilbert Merridew and the rest?"

"I can't explain yet; but it does. I am going to win, Jack. I am confident now as I never felt before, but I am sure of it now. I have found out for certain that he is a scoundrel, and this discovery about Karl has come as the result of some of my inquiries."

"I think you ought to tell me all you know, Olive."

"When I can, Jack. Let me go my own way. If anything were told before the proper time, it would spoil all the plans I have made. I must be sure my way. There is another thing, too. I can not see you very often for a time. I have been away from this house ever since you left, and I can't tell you where I have whole enterprise. And this must be prevented, whatever the cost to her. Even his displeasure—and he had made no secret that he was displeased—must not affect her decision.

"Nothing in mine never know what she was doing until her work was finished, and they could laugh over her experiences together.

But the next day Olive was soon aware that something unusual was to take place at South Kensington. It began with an awkward incident for her. Mrs. Grimston announced Fenwick as by the early afternoon, and a few minutes later she came face to face with Jack. He looked at her sharply, and she believed he had recognized her.

With great presence of mind she turned her head away and called out in German as if to some one above, that she would be there directly.

"German by love," she heard him say to himself in a tone of suspicion. "The—Fenwick more than that. If she can find out for sure her safety she would send for him at once.

He was very uneasy; and for the first time in that interview Olive felt a thrill of fear. Jack had told him, lead him to take some steps which would rule him from any [illegible] her. But [illegible] I suppose her name [illegible] vented, whatever the cost to her. Even his displeasure—and he had made no secret that he was displeased—must not affect her decision.

[illegible] Jack [illegible] anything?"

"Of course not. But [illegible] for you makes me [illegible] safety made it [illegible] to stay to it all."

"Safety? Now you are [illegible] me."

"But I assure you the [illegible] no danger, [illegible] should be at any rate yet. And, [illegible] any, I promise you I will at once send for you. The very instant."

"You may be too late then," he said gloomily.

But Olive held to her decision; and although he tried every argument and indirectly [illegible] to persuade her to tell him everything and let him help her she would not yield and would promise no more than that if she found any cause to fear for her safety she would send for him at once.

"WITH GREAT PRESENCE OF MIND SHE TURNED HER HEAD AWAY."

CHAPTER XXII.
An Awkward Meeting.

It was quite evident almost upon the dignity of the pompous footman to take notice of such a person as an underhousemaid than Olive was quite relieved when he retired at the door and told her it was the "housekeeper's room."

Ignorant of the etiquette of the servants' hall, she knocked and then, as no one came to call to enter, and when no response came, she knocked again. The door was jerked open forcibly, and I shall, I suppose," she said, in her broken English.

His head went up in the air with offended dignity. "The new housemaid, eh. Then why didn't you go to the butler Bring up me hup like this. Come in, and you are here, and go downstairs."

And very submissively Olga Schmidt did as she was told.

MAN MEASURES THE IMMENSITIES

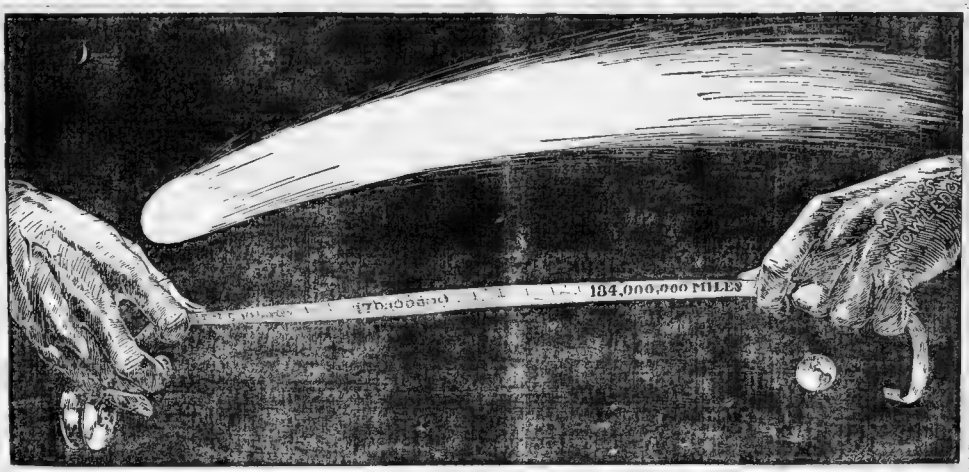
IN the very early morning hours a few human beings have been watching in the sky a graceful ribbon of light, one of those wonderful, beautiful messengers from outer space that we call comets.

All of us have read of this celestial visitor. Most of us have remained quietly sleeping, not even taking the trouble to get up to welcome the messenger from distant cosmic realms. Those sleeping heads—millions of them—that lie upon their pillows, in slumber, each morning, indifferent to the comet, tell a story not of indifference only, but of human development and growing human knowledge.

We little two-legged insects who live on this earth and peer out into the starlit blackness of night feel our wretched littleness. We are little, but we do learn gradually, we do conquer knowledge and the great distances—WE DO PROGRESS. And our calm indifference as to-day's comet comes dashing toward us, whirling around our sun, to vanish in space again, proves that we have grown.



He No Longer Shivers in Superstitious Fear Before the Beautiful Wonders of Nature

It is hard for us to realize how humanity formerly trembled in the presence of marvels which we now explain and admire. In old days an eclipse was a fearful thing. Men thought an evil spirit was eating up the moon, or eating up the sun, and that there would be no more moon or sun.

A comet was a thing even more fearful, a thing full of terror, threatening. After the murder of Julius Caesar, a wonderful comet appeared, so bright that it was visible for a long time before sunset. During eight days it was seen by human beings, as it circled at fearful speed around our sun, and then vanished into the infinite depths.

Comic little human beings, looking at it, decided promptly that it was a messenger sent to take the soul of Julius Caesar home where the other gods lived. So they made Caesar into a god, and they called that comet, "the Julian star," in honor of his name, Julius. At about this time Shakespeare tells you that the "sheeted dead did squeak and jibber in the Roman streets." All this they thought was on account of Caesar's death. If there are in the universe thinking minds which, compared to man, are as man compared with a black beetle—and there doubtless are—it would amuse those universal minds to see us little human beings convinced that a comet, one of the great express trains from the universe, came here on purpose to pick up and carry off one of us little pygmies.

It is as though the crickets along the New York Central Railway should lose their chief, and imagine the Twentieth Century Limited a messenger sent to fetch him.

Throughout history, until recent days, the coming of comets has been a signal of panic. One of these visitors came within the sight of men just after the Turks had taken Constantinople. That was a very fine comet, one of the most beautiful that men had ever seen, and the frightened little creatures supposed, of course, that it had something to do with Constantinople and the fighting Turks. All the church bells were ringing, night and day, to frighten the comet away, and to the usual prayers all good Christians were instructed to add the words, "Lord, save us from the devil, the Turks and the comet." After a while this beautiful comet disappeared, and the self-satisfied little men doubters slapped their chests proudly and said: "Ha! ha! She's gone! Our church bells and our prayers scared her away." They maintained that frame of mind for awhile, until there came among us such men as Newton, the one who discovered or rather formulated exactly, the law of gravitation. The comet that set Newton to thinking appeared in 1680.

Instead of ringing bells at it, Newton STUDIED it. He applied to this flying wonderful creature his law of gravitation, the law controlling every particle of matter within the universe. And he found that the tenuous, gauzy, rushing space phantom obeyed that law as the heaviest star or the grain of sand obeys it. It is interesting to know that, according to modern calculations, this comet which Newton studied coldly was the very comet that scared the Romans just after the death of Caesar. That same comet is expected to return within our range of vision about the year 2255, three and a half centuries from now. By that time let us hope man, who already measures the comets in their flight, will have progressed as much beyond our present state of knowledge as Newton had progressed beyond the days of Caesar.

Before Newton's day, Kepler, the sickly little boy, taught by the monks and sent on by them to the university of Tubingen, had thought over these comets, had written about them and guessed wonderfully near to the truth concerning them.

Like Newton, he surmised accurately that they traveled in regular orbits as our earth travels.

After Newton, Halley went on studying comets and classifying them. He was the first man to predict accurately the arrival of a certain comet; it came almost on time, in accordance with his prediction.

Clairault, after Halley, calculated the movements of the Halley comet, predicting the date of its return (in 1835) within three days.

To-day, men have calculated and manipulated out the paths of about two hundred different comets. They all follow the great law which governs our planet, and so far as we know, all of the planets and suns of the universe.

WE HAVE PROGRESSED. That which once made us tremble, shiver, ring the bells, hide in cellars and fear collisions, now fills us simply with scientific interest with ever greater admiration for the wonderful universe in which our earth is a little speck.

We know that our earth has twice passed through the tail of a comet, without being injured in any way. We know that one of the big comets called Biela's comet," struck something or went to pieces of its own accord, and broke up into a swarm of meteors, after having been apparently cut in two through coming in contact with our big planetary neighbor, Jupiter.

That's probably as much as you care to read about comets for one Sunday. It is worth your while, however, if you have not been reading anything about astronomy lately, to get some one of the good books that describe this wonderful universe, and man's really marvelous conquest of knowledge. There are many such books worth reading and all of them can be got at the public libraries, books by Ball, Newcombe, Flammarion, Serviss, and any number of others, whom librarians will gladly recommend.

Whether you have time for reading astronomy or not, you certainly have time occasionally to look out of doors at our near neighbors, the planets in our sun's family, sometimes only forty million miles away. The others are the neighbors of our sun, other suns, billions and billions of miles off.

And you have time to rejoice in the fact that those men who devote themselves to science, to the conquest of knowledge, have made possible for us all to share humbly in the results of their splendid work.

We look at the comet now without fear. We looked at it formerly like a child frightened by a candle and hundreds and thousands of inside of a carved pumpkin.

WE DO PROGRESS, and our progress and our knowledge have only begun.

LET HIM YELL

The Big Animal Moves On in Spite of Him.

THE REACTIONIST

These Are Anxious Days for Him

If you know a man hates what is new because it is new, show him the picture at the bottom of this page and say to him, Oh, let go of the elephant's tail."

Wherever there is forward movement wherever men are working to change things for the better, there is always some tiresome, vociferous goose hanging on to the tail of progress, yelling, "Whoa," and thinking himself a most useful and virtuous citizen.

Just now these reactionists, these men forever pointing backward, looking backward, are having rather a hard time of it.

Their "let well enough alone" policies are being hammered with the hard hammer of truth. The concerns to which they pointed with pride as typical of morality and all desirable qualities are shown to be thoroughly rotten.

This is a day when new ideas get a hearing, and when many "old respectabilities" are undergoing a most useful process of criticism and investigation.

Not long ago the man hanging on to the tail of progress, shuffling his feet along the ground, trying to act as a brake, was the highly admirable and much-praised citizen. He fights now against the idea of an independent political party, for instance.

He fought formerly just as hard against the idea of the steam engine and the locomotive. He prophesied solemnly that if human beings traveled steadily as fast as twenty miles an hour THE SPEED WOULD KILL THEM. They travel now at a hundred miles an hour in rare instances, at sixty and seventy miles an hour every day, and it doesn't kill them. Still, the same old reactionist, while he TRAVELS IN THE CARS HIMSELF, attacks just as energetically any other new proposition. He tells you that if you ever interfered with the stage coach ruin would come.

Now he tells you that if you ever think of interfering with the constitution or taking it fit modern conditions RUIN WILL COME.

He pretended the end of the republic and all sorts of disasters if public money should be spent for public schools. He thought it a dreadful outrage to tax one man in order to supply education for another man's children. He didn't think it any outrage to tax all of the people to supply him with a fine park to drive in.

He never got reconciled to the public school, but he says you must not make it free and that if you do it will be a great calamity.

He hates the idea of allowing women to vote. Women are not fit to vote, he thinks. If you let them vote you will break up the homes, etc., etc.

Not so long ago he was talking against universal suffrage for men in the same way. Only the rich ought to vote, he thought, only the man with money had a right to vote. "If you let all men vote," said he, "you will destroy the respect of the lower classes for upper classes and bring chaos.

When the modern political parties were established these reactionists with their eyes in the backs of their heads protested. It was sacrilege to abandon the old lines of political division. To day, when an independent political party, rejecting the worn-out, broken-down Republican and Democratic parties, suggested, these same reactionists were on hand to growl around the old, rotten as they are, because that they shan't be touched.

They attack a new party as they attacked the sewing machine. They thought the sewing machine would deprive poor sewing women of a living. It has employed tens of thousands more than were ever employed at sewing before.

These reactionists shriek most shrillingly if you suggest the control of Boston by the people.

This picture is printed that you may show it to the man who is forever declaiming against what is new. Where he hangs in this picture he has always been hanging. He has always been yelling "Whoa," always acting as a brake upon a movement infinitely more powerful than himself and all his associates.

Big Progress, fortunately, carries him and the other reactionists along in spite of themselves. They benefit with others. They are hooted at, BUT THEY DO NOT LEARN. The new thing that they attacked yesterday they enjoy to-day. But to-day they are attacking the new thing as violently as ever.

Don't listen to them. Be among those that have minds open for the truth, for new ideas.

Realize that going backward is impossible, that staying still means stagnation, THAT EVERY GOOD BRAIN IN THE COUNTRY SHOULD BE LOOKING AHEAD, GOING AHEAD, PLANNING AHEAD, FOREVER DISSATISFIED WITH WHATEVER HAS BEEN ACHIEVED, determined that this generation shall add its share to the accumulation of PROGRESS, and THOUGHT, and originality in the past.

The people are awake and thinking. New ideas are welcomed more and more eagerly. Old political superstitions are dying out.

If the people can once become united in an independent movement, shaking off the control of political bosses and of plutocrats that own them, thinking for themselves and acting together, the next ten years will have more vital, beautiful hours for us than WILL BE INFINITELY HELPFUL OFF AND SO WILL THE REST OF THE COUNTRY IN THE END.

SUMMER'S GOOD-BY

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

The following poem by Ella Wheeler Wilcox was inspired by the charming and artistic colored cover which adorns the current October number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Few recent works of art have created more general interest, more warm praise from the critics than "Summer's Good-By," on the cover of the October Cosmopolitan. This subject, pronounced by a California artist, Mr. Leo Beauvais, and the treatment of it is so effective that its future work will be watched with interest.—Ed.

"SUMMER'S GOOD-BY"

All in the time when Earth did most deplore
The cold, ungracious aspect of young May,
Sweet Summer came and bade him smile once more.
She wove bright garlands, and in winsome play
She bound him willing captive.
Day by day
She found new wiles wherewith his heart to please;
Or bright the sun, or if the skies were gray,
They laughed together under spreading trees,
By running brooks or on the sandy shores of seas.
They were but comrades. To that riant maid
No serious word he spake; no lover's plea.
Like careless children, glad and unafraid,
They sported in their opulence of glee.
Her shining tresses floated wild and free;
In simple lines her emerald garments hung;
She was both good to hear, and fair to see;
And when she laughed, then Earth laughed too, and flung
His cares behind him, and grew radiant and young.
One golden day, as he reclined beneath
The arching azure of enchanting skies,
Fair Summer came, engirdled with a wreath
Of gorgeous leaves, all scintillant with dyes;
Effulgent was she; yet within her eyes
There hung a quivering mist of tears unshed;
Her crimson mantled bosom shook with sighs;
Above him bent the glory of her head;
And on his mouth she pressed a splendid kiss, and fled.

"TAKE OFF" IS PUT ON LOCAL STAGE

"Follies" Is Only New Musical Comedy Production of Week; "Divorcons" Is Coming.

FOUR of the regular houses change their attractions to-morrow, and the stock and vaudeville houses also make changes, so the coming week will be a busy and interesting one. Fresh from the roof gardens of New York comes Ziegfeld's "Follies," called the greatest "take-off" of the season, and Grace George comes in the play with which she set London talking earlier in the year. Manager Morison is hitching his wagon to a star (not a joke) in putting on "Grumpstark," but his hitching rope is strong and his ballast is secure. Here is the list of attractions at the local houses:

What the Theatres Offer.

Hollis Street Theatre

Grace George, direct from her New York and London triumphs, comes to the Hollis street Theatre for two weeks, opening next Monday night in "Divorcons," by Victorien Sardou. The cast includes Frank Worthing, Miss Ethel Barrymore's leading man, and Miss Grace George will appear in the role which has been said to be especially adapted to her. "Divorcons" has to do largely with the all-engrossing question of divorce. Miss George is said to have an unusual opportunity in this play, and will be supported by a company of excellent merit, including Frank Worthing and Max Freeman, who will be with Miss George.

Boston Theatre

This week's attraction will consist of Grace Hayward's stage version of George Barr McCutcheon's popular novel, "Grumpstark." In dramatizing the story the author episodes have been eliminated, and the action begins with the arrival of Larry and his companion at the hotel at Edelweiss after their long search for the mysterious Miss Guggenslacker. The principal episode of the third act, which passes in the throne room, in the famous love scene between Larry and the Princess. Some elaborate realistic effects will be shown in the reproduction of the ground about the hotel at Edelweiss, and Stage Director Shuder is planning to make the stage pictures incidental to the last appreciable in effect. The cast of the principal characters is announced as follows: Grumpstark, Donald Meek; Prince Gabriel, Theodore Friebus; Baron Danglos, Tom Maclarnie; Prince Belarot, Walter Wark; Prince Lorenz, John Meehan; Strata, Iris Thayer; Janet, Eleanor Gordon; Countess Dagmar, Mary Sanders; Anne Yvonne, Lucille LaVerne; Lady Linnet Watts Reade, Lady Mirna, Rose Morton; Joel, Vinie Mason; Therese, Gertrude Bond.

Colonial Theatre

The new Ziegfeld Revue, "Follies of 1907," described as a strenuous and a new national show, will be the attraction at the Colonial for two weeks. The cast includes Harry Bulger, Barney Bernard and Lulu Beaton and Lulu Batson and Lulu famous comedy band; Nora Bayes, the bandbox comedienne; Mlle Dazie, better known perhaps as Mlle. Vaudeville, in her dances; Miss Grace La Rue, Miss Mae Murray, Miss Ethel Green, Miss Helen Broderick, Miss Lillian Lee, Anna Belle Whitford, Grace Leigh, Frank Mayne, Marius Libby, Florence Tempest, May Leslie, also the Misses Anna Held girls, known to fame as bathing girls, the beautiful Pony girls, the French Dancing girls, the military drummer girls and many others. Some of the satirical hits are shown on the bill as well, Mark Twain, Carnegie, Count Tolstoi, Anthony Comstock, Chauncey Depew and District Attorney Jerome.

Keith's Theatre

Harry Bulger, the comedian who made such a success in "Woodland," will head the list in an act made up largely of patter songs. Salerno, European juggler of small objects, will exhibit his marvelous skill. Emmet DeVoy and company, in Mr. DeVoy's fantastic comedietta, "Six Persons," will be seen for the first time here. Julius Tannen will return with a batch of new stories and songs. The remarkable swimming exhibition of the Flinnens will be one of the most interesting features. Arthur Sidell of the Misses Morgan and Sidell will be heard in a repertoire of songs and stories. The Sidells are a clever family of entertainers. Mr. and Mrs. Mack Murphy, Irish and eccentric gymnastic act, and the Princess Pantheon Musical and Dancing Girls complete the bill. Pictures of the Boston ball players will be shown, and Mr. Keith will be present to receive the applause of the fans.

Tremont Theatre

For the week beginning to-morrow matinee the Tremont Theatre offers the favorite American humorist, George Fuller Golden, the famous comic and character comedian, Gus Elen, a sensation in London, the Alexandroff troupe of Russian dancers, Ike Jungar from Berlin, Nevada and Carrol, novelty musicians, Fields and Ward in humorous chatter, the Nippon Japanese troupe of acrobats, and others of the good variety. Perhaps several of these new attractions will be seen for the first time here to-day. Miss Hope Booth will be remembered as the leading lady with the Blonde Lady company, presenting the first of a series of Sunday evening concerts will be begun.

Orpheum Theatre

The English actor William F. Hawtrey supported by English players is the headline feature at the Orpheum in the dramatic playlet, "Impudence." It was an instantaneous success when Mr. Hawtrey was first seen in it. Others of the "A Messy Affair," Mlle. Dazie in various dances, Lambert and Ball in a variety of instruments, Mack and Walters in a comedy sketch, Bessie Wynn, Morton and Glass in a very clever singing and dancing specialty, Ward Brothers, acrobats, good pantomime, the Stirling brothers, acrobats, and Imhof, Conn and Corinne, Lair in trick motor cycling will complete the bill.

Majestic Theatre

At the Majestic Theatre Blanche Bates in David Belasco's play "The Girl of the Golden West" is establishing new records. The tremendous demand for seats for this vivid play of the good luck days shows that the playgoers who found to see the performance last season are determined to do so this time, and now that Belasco's engagement is the last during which Miss Bates will be seen here as "The Girl," for Mr. Belasco is to present his star in a new play following the present tour, the Wednesday matinee the management is to have on its guests the Society of California Pioneers in New England.

Park Theatre

There is no doubt that William Collier will crowd the Park Theatre for many weeks to come in "Caught in the Rain," one of the funniest farce comedies seen in Boston in a long time, but the engagement of Mr. Collier's present engagement.

Castle Square Theatre

For forty years "The Grand Duchess" has been a favorite with lovers of comic opera. It will be sung at the Castle Square during the coming week. The old Duchess possesses all the vivacity of characteristic French comic opera its self-becoming, and it tells the romantically sun-rose story of the court of the little principality of Gerolstein with a fund of fresh and amusing humor. For the cast of this week-stock production Manager Mason has made the following arrangement: Characters: Miss Hazel Lane and Miss Edith Edwards will appear alternately as the Grand Duchess, with Harry Davies and Henry Taylor sharing the role of Fritz. Miss Lee will be Baron Puttlitz, after an absence of several weeks in the character of Prince Paul, with Miss Hazel von Buesing as Wanda.

Globe Theatre

For genuine ear-splitting fun in musical comedy innovations Percy Haswell and the Globe Theatre show a record that easily carry off the palm. Miss Haswell's costumes, selection, with the novel arrangements and startling surprises, are the talk of the town, and are to the liking of the fun-loving public. It is due to the whole company to say that it is a well-balanced one, and that Billy B. Van is ably assisted by a corps of clever comedians. Miss Haswell's beauty chorus is also a strong feature, and as a whole the entertaining offering is an especially pleasing one. The young ladies were in attendance at the matinee.

FROM ACROSS THE FOOTLIGHTS

BY "THE OBSERVER"

DAVID BELASCO and David Warfield have made a ten-strike in their new play for the latter's use. "A Grand Army Man" will undoubtedly be some as popular as did "The Music Master" and it will strike home to more people, for every person in America has a vital interest in the Grand Army men and the love of one member for his dead comrade's son who sees wrong gets down into the heart-strings and tugs at them severely. Mr. Belasco has been very careful to get every detail absolutely true to life and the result is a play that is devoid of theatricals and melodramatic clap-traps and is compelling in its very naturalness. It is the most human natural piece he has ever given us. There is lots of comedy and there are the unusually quiet Marie Hites, whose comeback as the Boston favorite was hailed by "The Music Master" is remembered most pleasantly. "The Grand Army Man" has no sleeper. Vinnie Perry plays a winsome and charming young girl. The scene at the dedication of the new G. A. R. Hall is perfectly staged and the trial in the court room is marvelously realistic and dramatic without staginess. The dramatic writers of the Boston press were guests of Mr. Belasco at Providence on Thursday, making the journey in three White steamer cars under the guidance of Manager Joseph Hitchway of the White company. It was the most enjoyable experience of the year.

* * * * * * *

YOU'D applaud critics who enjoy praising to pieces a dramatic production, with regard to its truthfulness to life will be interested, I think, to learn how carefully David Belasco works to make sure that his plays are perfect in this respect. Taking the court room scene of "A Grand Army Man" as one example Mr. Belasco not only went to Ireland to see the court room he intended to depict, but he made a careful study of the Indiana laws bearing on cases similar to that in the story. In addition, he hired several of New York's greatest lawyers to give their opinions as to the delicate points of business and the manners and customs of the various court officials which he has made a part of the play's act. He spent nearly a week in getting this one act perfected.

WE are to have plenty of grand opera in Boston this year, judging from the present indications. The wond'rfully efficient San Carlos company which is now at the Park Theatre last season, with Alice Nielson in the leading roles, is now under the management of Klaw & Erlanger, and comes to Boston on December 9 for a short stay, probably at the Colonial Theatre. Two weeks early next week are to be given up by the Boston Theatre to the grand opera companies of Conried and Hammerstein, and these, taken with the operatic productions by the efficient company at the Castle Square, make it certain that the music-loving public is not to be neglected.

* * * * * * *

IN suffering recently to the fact that the Boston and the Bowdoin Square Theatre stock companies were having it a little easier than most stock companies in the matter of rehearsals on the Monday matinees, I neglected to mention the management of the Castle Square company as among the progressive ones in this respect. It was merely an oversight. Manager Mason will not have rehearsals on Thursday mornings or Monday matinees after

Nemo Bulletin No. 1

STOUT WOMEN

WE HAVE BROUGHT HEALTH, COMFORT AND STYLE TO MILLIONS OF STOUT WOMEN

We count it a duty to our hundreds of thousands of patrons to publish a series of Weekly Bulletins explaining the exclusive merits of the NEMO SELF-REDUCING CORSET, so that stout women may be warned against wasting their time and money on worthless imitations.

The NEMO is the only corset that is more than a corset: that does something for you which no other corset can do.

For example: The NEMO SELF-REDUCING CORSET is famous throughout the world as the only corset that has ever helped a stout woman to reduce her figure with comfort and safety.

It will give any stout woman a better shape than she ever had before, so that her skirts may be "taken in" three or four inches.

There is no substitute for this corset, and the numerous imitations have succeeded in nothing but in emphasizing the self-evident superiority of the

Nemo SELF-REDUCING CORSET.

BEWARE of IMITATIONS.

Physicians, dealers and dressmakers will advise you to get the corset with the Improved Self-Reducing Strap, the Graduated Front Steel and the Double Garter Attachment, all of which are patented Nemo features, exclusive and indispensable, without which your figure cannot be successfully and safely reduced.

Next week's Bulletin will explain how and why these special Nemo features are doing wonders for stout women. Read it.

Economy One Self-Reducing Corset, at $3.00, will outwear three ordinary $1 00 corsets, and hold its shape until it is worn out.

You will find Nemo Corsets in every good store where corsets are sold

SYMPHONY SOLOISTS COMING.

Boston's own orchestra to have world's greatest artists at twelve of its concerts.

GREAT ARTISTS WILL APPEAR IN BOSTON

Many Changes in Personnel of Symphony Organization Announced.

The subscription sale of seats for the coming season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Muck director, will begin at Symphony Hall tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. There will be 250 seats for the Thursday afternoon concerts, which will be sold on Friday morning at the same hour. The $15 seats for the Friday afternoon concerts will be sold on Thursday, beginning at 10 o'clock, and the $10 seats on Friday. The Monday evening concerts will be omitted.

It has been stated in New York that Mr. Nikisch, who is to be the conductor for the season of twenty-six concerts in that city, will be the first season engagement by Muck if some unforeseen event should prevent the latter from appearing.

The new men of note or local prominence to join the Boston Symphony Orchestra will include the following: Mr. Wendling will leave the Philharmonic Society of New York to become solo flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Wendling has been a soloist at the Royal Court Theatre of Stuttgart and for several years the concert master at the Wagner festival at Bayreuth, where Dr. Muck became acquainted with his abilities. Herr Berg of Copenhagen will take the position of second concert master, which was created for Mr. Theodore Spiering. Mr. Meldonian, one of the best of the violists, and Mr. Pierce, a new violinist, will be members of the first violin section. Mr. Pierce is a graduate of the Institute of Musical Art of New York, where he studied under Franz Kneisel. He has played in the Kneisel Quartet, and after the end of last season Mr. Theodore Hasting left the Kneisel Quartet to join Mr. Muck's place. Mr. Pierce, who is the first violinist with whom Mr. Loeffler will be associated, is a native of Vienna. Mr. Zeiler, the viola soloist, is expected to arrive in Boston from Stuttgart before the end of October. The name of the new viola player has not yet been announced.

Arthur Kautzenbach of Berlin will take the place in the 'cello section made vacant by the resignation of J. Adamowski. A. Goldstein, whose father was for many years a member of the orchestra, and Mr. Rogart of Boston will join the second violins. Mr. Tecchi will leave the second violins to play with the first. The vacancy in the viola ranks caused by Mr. Agnesse and Hyper of Vienna. Mr. Fiedler, a former member of the orchestra, returns from New York to be the second bassoonist.

There will be two new horns, so that there will be eight. Mr. Tuerk, who was born in Mr. Kneisel's town, Mr. Tuerk of Boston will be the fourth horn player. Mr. Tecchi will be the only member of the old orchestra who will not be with us when it opens in October 26. It is gratifying to learn that Mr. Muck found many of the players whom he had retained particularly fine.

The Boston Orchestra Club is formed for at least twelve concerts to be given under the management of Henry L. Higginson. The artists of the club are: Mme. Marcella Sembrich, Bach, Mme. Ternina, Mme. Melba will sing after the holidays, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Mme. Gadski, Mme. Nordica, Mme. Eames, Mme. Calvé, Mme. Carreno, Kathleen Parlow, Ysaye, Kreisler and Mossel. Busoni and Paderewski are also engaged, but it is not known whether they will appear in this country in about three weeks' time after the first of the year. It is not known whether the new symphony will be played by the orchestra before Christmas or not. The soloists will be Messrs. Kreisler, Wendling and Thunder.

FIRST CLASS GERMS IN FIRST CLASS CARS

Ten Deadly Species on Bordeaux Express, But Fewer on Second Class Coach.

Paris, Sept. 28. Railroad training in France does not seem to be accident proof. It is a terrible risk undertaking if the group of bacilli gathered in a first class car on the Bordeaux express are as dangerous as the rarer and more subtle germs.

The chief cause of the differences are on the railroads, where the bacilli on all a specialty, and where the diseases are the diseases and the diseases associated with them.

Paris is the only place, as far as I know, where the bacilli are in such numbers as to be dangerous. There are the bacilli of the diseases, and the bacilli of the diseases, and the bacilli of the diseases, and

CHINA'S GREATEST STATESMAN

Wu Ting Fang, high in the councils of the ancient empire, and loved and respected in this country, may again become the Ambassador at Washington, if President Roosevelt agrees to it.

Washington, Sept. 28. When Wu Ting Fang returns to Washington as the representative of his government it is certain that which he will do provided President Roosevelt overlooks the respect, there will come to the United States the most popular Chinaman who ever occupied a diplomatic post at the American capital. The six years Wu passed as Minister from China to Washington saw the once obscure man raised to the greatest prominence he had ever reached.

Wu Ting Fang has traveled far and wide in the country. He did much information of America's ways. Men sought in the public service. The last four years he struggled against Chinese conservatism, but he succeeded in putting into effect many progressive rules. He tried once to institute trial by jury in China, but this movement failed.

Admitted to English Bar

Before he retired here in 1907 he had been admitted to the bar in London, had served the great Viceroy Li Hung Chang at Tientsin. He speaks English perfectly and can restrain the ways and the ideas of Westerners better than any other Chinaman who had ever come to the United States.

He made his mark here from the start. There was no company of men or women in which he was not at home. His mind plays easily and swiftly. He is an eloquent, witty, astute, discerning and cultured Chinaman. He speedily adopted himself to the ways of the country. He read the newspapers and kept himself intimately acquainted with all the topics of the day.

He saw everybody who called upon him, but beneath all of his camaraderie, he was always inquisitorial. He question [illegible] every body. Any interrogation was met by an other "Are you married?" would quickly be his first remark to anybody who met him. If the answer was "yes" he would come back quickly with "how many children have you got?" He was a very genius for judging superficial [illegible].

An Athlete in Build.

Physically, the returned Chinese minister is of medium height and of medium build, a trifle stouter than the average of his race, and with the muscles of an athlete. When he occupied the handsome Chinese legation building in Washington four years ago Madame Wu lived as a Westerner. She was accompanied by Madame Wu, whom he married in China twenty-five years ago, a woman of distinguished presence and unusual force of character. Her boy, then eight years old, went to the Washington public schools, and the lad excelled in his studies.

Minister had an automobile of the [illegible] pattern and he delighted in running it himself on the streets. He went to the [illegible] horse races and enjoyed [illegible] sports of the Americans.

Gained Fame as Orator.

Wu soon settled himself with progressive [illegible] in Washington and became a [illegible] feted. Perhaps what did in the country [illegible] time of his [illegible] was a speech he made at a [illegible] dinner given by the Americans. The American Minister [illegible] Wu [illegible] after his [illegible] to the United States. Wu brought [illegible] to his feet by the [illegible] of his address. He [illegible] the Americans [illegible] Wu brought [illegible] the Atlantic, extolled the [illegible] cities of the United States and then went on to [illegible] after having spent three years in study and in [illegible] visiting the cities.

He was the first Chinese lawyer ever admitted to practice before the English bar in Hongkong. He attracted the attention of Li Hung Chang during the [illegible] occupied [illegible] position under the famous [illegible] statesman, as his legal adviser and [illegible] for foreign affairs.

Traveled a Great Deal.

The greatest service he rendered to his own country and to the United States while in Washington was in 1900, when the ministers of all civilized countries were shut up in Pekin during the Boxer uprising and nobody could determine whether they were alive or dead. A most trying position for a diplomatic representative could not be imagined. His messages to the American people, through the press, at that time served to allay the public anxiety. He is a genuine Cantonese Chinaman—not of the Manchu race, which overran the North and seized the reins of power. He was born sixty years ago, near Canton. His father was a literary man. He attended Anglo-Chinese College in Hongkong. He went to England in 1874, graduated as a lawyer in London's Inns and was called to the English bar. Before returning to China he toured the continent, visiting every European city and country of importance on the continent of the Atlantic, visited the principal cities of the United States and then went to China after having spent three years in study and in [illegible] visiting the cities.

ELITE HAS WEEK OF AUTUMNAL BRIDALS

Host of Nuptials in City, at Shore and on Country Estate Mark Fall's Arrival.

The past week has been a record-breaker as one in the way of bridals, hardly a day having past without at least one wedding of note.

The wedding at Nahant on Tuesday of Miss Ethel Greenough, daughter of Mal. Joseph B. Greenough, of Boston, and Maury Holmes, a New York lawyer, was one of the most brilliant out-of-town affairs of the week.

The ceremony took place at noon in the Union church and was witnessed by representatives of Boston, New York, Cleveland and Philadelphia society.

The decorations were of hydrangeas and potted plants used with fine effect about the chancel and aisles.

The bride, who wore a gown of white lace over white silk, was attended by her sister, Eupsala Greenough, as maid of honor. Miss Greenough wore a pink chiffon gown over pink silk and a pink picture hat to match.

The bridesmaids were Misses Ruth Greenough of New York, cousins of the bride. Their gowns were of pale green satin, trimmed with lace, and they wore pale green picture hats. Their bouquets were of blush-pink asters.

John W. Norton, of New York, was the groom's best man, and the ushers were John Brice, Pierpont Davis, James Blair, Bridgman Curtiss, of New York, and James Curtiss, of Boston.

Bishop Lawrence officiated and after the service a reception was held at the Greenough summer residence on Nahant road. Mr. and Mrs. Holmes will reside in New York.

After All, Trifles Cause Most of the Ills of This World

By Frances Savage

In all the discussions of the many matrimonial ranges, it appears that the causes of woes be in the hands of the gods. Certainly they do not set the ground for the battle where it is fought, nor do they furnish the ammunition. The little everyday annoyances, the trifles that seem to be magnified a thousand times in the heat of the moment, are those that bring about the separation.

It is generally a woman who is the source of a trouble she does not recognize herself once it is spoken of. For this reason, after nearly every quarrel, she will say impatiently of herself and of her lover, "I am growing worse and worse every day."

Why?

It is the result of a habit of mind that makes her see only the failure in little things. She does not look for the good in her lover, but for the bad.

And why?

What else could be expected from a woman who has been taught from childhood that the word he has chosen to be her husband is to be supported of him. Indeed he loves her, if a man wants a garden he ought to plant the seeds and do his best to attend to the every-day pruning of the evil little weeds that impede its growth and watching with the greatest interest the transition from a useless-looking bulb into a beautiful flower.

The Way of Man

YET this same man will never think of a place for his home and if by chance she is needing and asking for some of the little tokens of rare and affections with which he surrounded her before marriage he forgets the kiss before starting away

15 DEAD, 38 MAIMED AS BLUNDER SENDS FLYER CRASHING INTO FREIGHT.

Appalling Railroad Wreck Reported on the B. & O., 4 Miles From Wheeling, W. Va.

TRAINS MEET HEAD ON

Richard Carle's Company, "The Spring Chicken," in Crash of Chicago Express.

PASSENGERS CRUSHED

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept 28.—Passenger train No. 14, eastbound, the fast Chicago express on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, while running seventy-five miles an hour, collided headon with the second section of No. 27, a freight heavily loaded with coal from Benwood to Newark, at Indian Run Bridge near the east end of the Bellaire yards late this afternoon, killing fifteen trainmen and passengers, fatally injuring six or eight others and badly maiming thirty more.

The signal operator at the Bellaire yard office, whose name is Mottinger, is said to have given the freight the eastbound track instead of the westbound, as he should, and the trains crashed together without warning. Both engines reared straight up in the air and came down with a crash. They were demolished, and a portion of one overturned over a forty-foot embankment. The baggage car and smoker of the passenger were torn into bits.

Nearly all of the injured were in the smoker. The Richard Carle "Spring Chicken" theatrical company occupied a part of the car on the rear of the train.

Carle's Narrow Escape

Alfred Dolby, musical director of the Carle company, who suffered serious injuries, had his head so badly crushed that its amputation was necessary, ending a brilliant career as a violinist.

Richard Carle himself was dragged from the smoker in which every passenger was killed or wounded, by the crew of a Pullman but an instant before the collision.

At the point where the trains crashed there is a sharp curve that it is impossible for the engineers to see more than 200 feet ahead.

The crash of the trains and rear of escaping steam drew an immense crowd and a work train of rescuers soon arrived. The wounded were placed in baggage and express cars and hurried to Wheeling.

Chop Off Engineer's Leg.

Engineer Lisconb was caught under the wreckage of his engine. Chop suey leg off, will you?" he called to bystanders of the yard force. An axe was secured and while the steam was pouring in upon him he saw them hack off the limb just above the knee. He was scalded all over the body and died at the Bellaire Hospital an hour later. He was conscious to the last.

General Manager Fitzgerald's train was at Bywood Junction when the news of the wreck was received. It was converted into a relief train, and, guarded with doctors and nurses, was quickly rushed to the scene of the wreck. The dead were removed to undertaking parlors in the city, and all the injured were taken to the Bonn Hospital in Bellaire and the Glendale Hospital at Moundsville.

The Known Dead.

"I HAVE always been a model wife and mother. I have helped my husband make a home and, until about two years ago I was virtually half supporting the family. I even paid the bills when both of my children were born."

This is the answer of Mrs. Inez Gertrude Buss Knowles, to the divorce suit which her husband, Charles R. Knowles, the Worcester contractor, has just brought against her in which Leroy S. Kendrick, the well known trombone player of Boston, is also named.

Bravely determinedly, the pretty woman drew herself to her full stature as she flashed this statement from her lips, laboring under the weight of the second blow which had just fallen upon her as the result of the suit against her by her husband, the fact that Kendrick had just received word from Frank [illegible] Smith, a partner of the prominent [illegible] of the Park Street congregational Church that her services as soprano there were no longer required.

Prince and Congressman Praises Pe-ru-na

I Cheerfully Recommend Pe-ru-na As a Very Effective Remedy.

Prince Jonah Kalanianaole, 1522 K St., N. W., Washington, D. C., Delegate in Congress from Hawaii, writes: "I can cheerfully recommend your Peruna as a very effective remedy for coughs, colds and catarrhal trouble."

NO other remedy in the world has had Dr. Peruna's cures indorsed and prescribed by leading physicians as he has from people of high station as Peruna. Not only by people of high station, but by people of lowly station. From paupers to lawyer, from millionaire to day laborer, Peruna has been lauded and recommended for the various climatic ailments of summer and winter.

Read the following sincere testimonials from notable people:

An Invigorating Tonic.

Hon. C. Slemp, Congressman from Virginia, writes:

"I can cheerfully say that I have used your valuable remedy, Peruna with beneficial results and can also truthfully recommend your remedy to all I look and feel like a new man. I would like always to feel and do today.

"I often recommend Peruna to my friends."

System Badly Run Down.

Hon. W. H. Kobaugh, Ex-Member of Congress, writes:

"Washington, D. C.

"Dear Sir—I had been suffering for years with catarrh of the head and throat and was badly run down in my system. I had tried all kinds of remedies without relief. I was induced to try Peruna and after using two bottles I was entirely cured. I have used it in my family since with good results, and can recommend it to all suffering with catarrh."

Peruna in Tablet Form.—For those who prefer to use medicine in tablet form Peruna Tablets are now obtainable. These tablets represent the solid medicinal ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

A Bicyclist's Experience.

Mr. John Perrault, 703 Dearborn St., Boulevard St. Paul, near Montreal, Canada, writes:

"I have been a bicyclist for over five years, and last spring I caught cold and did not take anything for it, for I thought it was not bad enough, but it came to catarrh.

"I was so discouraged that I didn't know what to do. I could not sleep. I always felt tired and troubled.

"Finally I went to take Peruna. After I had taken one bottle I felt better. Before my release he has served several terms at Deer Island for minor offenses. Broken in spirit and disheartened Denehy is said to be a changed man.

THESE RUGS ARE POSITIVELY ON SALE AT FULLY ⅓ TO ½ LESS THAN ACTUAL WHOLESALE COST TODAY, and we absolutely refuse to sell more than one to a customer. If we did not put a limit on these rugs every dealer in town would be here to buy them, and they would not last 15 minutes. We want our customers to get the entire benefit of these sensational bargains, and we are determined that every rug that goes out of this house at one of these prices shall go into a home and not into another store to be sold at a higher price. They are the most terrific bargains ever offered in the history of Boston, and they will create a furor that will be remembered long after other rug sales are forgotten. The designs are the most wonderful ever produced in this country. They look exactly like real Persian and Turkish rugs and they are almost half an inch thick. Every month since the opening of this store we have sold three times as many of these Axminster rugs as any other store in the city of Boston, or as many as any three other stores put together, but never in our career have we been able to offer them at the prices quoted for this sale beginning Monday morning at 8:30 sharp. # SCHOOL FUND UP TO FINANCE BOARD

Mayor in Letter Refers Question of $500,000 Appropriation to Commission's Members.

WANTS PUBLIC OPINION

Mayor John F. Fitzgerald does not want to sign the appointments of Commissioner Arthur H. Nason and Architect William G. Rantoul as members of the Commission on Industrial Education unless he is assured that both gentlemen intend to remain in office for the full term of five years. He can use this year for examination and consideration for the proposed changes and additions to this educational system.

He thinks there will soon be others which will do the same kind of educational work and that it would be better to take such consideration now than to appoint others in a few months, or perhaps years, after they have gone out of office.

The Mayor says he understands that the School Board is willing to add to its membership two members of the Arts League, and he suggests that the Arts League should name two members and the School Board two members, and that these four should name a fifth member, who would be the chairman of the board.

The Mayor says the Arts League should improve the existing school system, and that half of the appropriation would be permitted to carry out such improvements. The other half would be used to expend in such a way as to serve as a guide for the future in the matter of the School Board. That is exactly what the Arts League wants to do, to obtain data which will be of a scientific nature, and that in view of similar proposals, under the head of private bills, it was a question whether the city would go any further in the matter of appropriations for pupils seeking special trade or industrial education.

Refers Question to Board

"I stated, however, that if the School Board or committee of the opinion that I should refer the matter I did not care to stand in the way, but I thought that they desired to be used purely in their discretion. I referred the matter, however, before signing the matter to the attention of a subcommittee of your committee which would, on the matter to other matters, be a committee of the whole, and I am now in receipt of the following letter from the chairman of the committee, which I refer to the Board for its consideration:

"I cannot help feeling that in the light of the decision of the Legislature to go into the matter that would be proper for us to consider at this time the question of the appointment of any more members. I feel that the work will be duplicated if we have a separate committee, and I am sure that it would be the wish of the members of the committee that it was the wish of the members of the committee that it was the wish of the members of the committee that it was

WEDS MILLIONAIRE; STICKS TO STAGE

Miss Lilla Brennan of South Boston, Comedy Star, Now Mrs. E. W. Shafer.

WILL HEAD OWN COMPANY

Miss Lilla Brennan of South Boston who is known on the vaudeville and musical comedy stage as "just the cutest little thing that ever came from Boston" has become the wife of Edward A. Shafer, wealthy son of a retired steel man of Buffalo, N. Y.

One of her wedding presents from "Papa" Shafer was a touring auto in which the newly married couple is now making a wedding journey.

Two months' rest and then back to the stage is the present plan for Mrs. Shafer. Her husband, "Angel," plays second part, however, has found the way and Miss Brennan will head her own vaudeville company, including fourteen people, in a new sketch staged and backed by her husband.

Went on Stage at Five.

Miss Brennan is a dainty South Boston girl whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Brennan, are among the best known residents in that section of the city. She took her first stage experience at the tender age of five years, fifteen years ago. Since then she has climbed up and up the stage of fame, but recently left the ranks of the "Big Time" and the Million Dollar Circuit to become the wealthy Buffalo bride. Miss Brennan is widely known in Boston and New England, especially for her work on the vaudeville stage with her droll, Georgie Wilson. What Mrs. Shafer's future on the stage will be is a matter of conjecture, but it is generally believed that she will not desert the footlights entirely, as she has been engaged by Manager Sam Scribner to appear in a new production which will be staged in Buffalo, as well as several other cities.

Mr. Shafer's father is reported to be one of the richest men in Buffalo. He never questioned the choice of a bride by his son, and at the wedding in the Church of St. Francis of Assisi, New York, which was one of the biggest affairs on the part of friends and relatives who attended. After the ceremony he furnished a supper for the party. Miss Brennan and Mr. Shafer met five years ago, when she was playing, under Mortimer M. Theobald management in "The High School Girls."

Mr. Shafer is to purchase a handsome home on Long Island, where he will take his bride when she is not on the stage.

If it's Morse-Made it's correct. If it's correct it's Morse-Made.

Good looks is the mask that often hides trashy clothing.

The unseen parts, the quality, and the workmanship will reveal their character after the test of wear has been made. If you want that test to be satisfactory you'll buy only such clothing as you know to be reliable—Morse-Made clothing for instance.

If there had been a weak point in our methods it would have been discovered at some time during the past 55 years, but Morse-Made clothing is even more popular with the people of New England now than ever before.

Ask your dealer for it, and look for our label inside the inside coat-pocket. If he doesn't sell it, write us and we'll tell you who does.

Women Aid in Dethroning Old Village Ruler; Wage Lively War in Bitter Political Contest

"MILKING" ENTRIES BRING ABOUT THE DOWNFALL OF THE "BOSS."

New Water Supply Causes Strife That Ends in Victory for Younger Element.

CAMPAIGN VERY EXCITING

Aged Leader, Undismayed by Defeat, Bases Hopes on County Convention.

Longer than most of the residents of Kingston, Plymouth county, have been on earth, Walter H. Faunce has been the ruler of the village and he was only dethroned in the canvass by one of the most unusual combinations ever occurring in a Massachusetts town and county politics. Luzzies which the old Puritan political leader made in phase in the town records furnished the ammunition and even the women of the town of Kingston were enlisted in the campaign against him.

When the aged town leader was at the head of the Board of Selectmen of Kingston they put in a new village water supply much against his will, and later they added to it considerable extension. So much it made [illegible] the town ledger nearly every time the town [illegible] ple," and, when an item of expense and [illegible]

Lives on Historic Farm.

For a long time an element in Kingston has had it in for Chairman Faunce. They unearthed all these entries ahead of Tuesday's election and here was a decided victory. The county Republican convention takes place next Wednesday at Brockton, which will also be Governor's day at the fair. There will be a lively old time.

Chairman Faunce is of a genuine old New England type. He is approximately 70 years old and has lived in one house and on one farm all of his life, and his ancestors lived there before him.

The farm is on Old Wapping road and nestles on the banks of the Jones river, where the Pilgrims went to establish their farms immediately after they had set their feet on Plymouth rock. Mr. Faunce's relatives settled on the farm in 1722.

Every one of the Faunces was influential in Plymouth county, and Walter H. Faunce naturally was honored by his fellow townsmen. A longer ago than almost anybody can remember in Kingston he was a selectman, he was chairman of the board, until two years ago last June, when a much younger element in the village succeeded in depriving him of the office. For twenty years he had been a member of the Board of County Commissioners and for three years its chairman, ruling the destinies of the 250,000 people in the county about as with powers greater than most public officers have in Massachusetts.

He took it as a matter of course that he should run affairs, and many of the villagers of Kingston were afraid now to discuss the political defeat above a whisper.

He does not show his seventy-five years. Extremely tall, he is lean and wiry and as an arrow. He wears a long grey beard and his hair is almost white, but his eyes are as bright as a boy's, for he is a born fighter.

Result Does Not Worry Him.

"Bothered by Tuesday's result?" he exclaimed to an American reporter. "Never! That was only a town affair. It doesn't amount to a thing. They have not ground upon which they can attack me, and I haven't the slightest fear that I will be defeated in the county convention next year. I am absolutely confident of the result.

"They used the most deceitful means to try to defeat me here. I got 162 votes in the caucus and one of them was a Republican. I have numbers of Democratic friends, and some of them suggested to me that they would vote for me, but I asked them not to. The opposition brought in a lot of Democrats, and they had some who had never voted before. At that my delegate were only defeated by a handful."

Thomas W. Bailey is the young man who defeated Mr. Faunce two years ago, and he was selected as the man to lead the county battle against the old leader. A bitter campaign was fought. The caucus was called for 7.30 o'clock last Tuesday night, and from far and near the voters trooped into Kingston village.

Interest Was Intense.

All Kingston's 2,200 inhabitants were interested in the caucus. When it was over most of them gasped with surprise. Faunce's ticket was defeated, receiving from 94 to 101 votes, while the Bailey ticket got from 127 to 129. The Bailey campaign committee, which included Alexander Holmes, James L. Hall, Dr. A. B. Holmes and Galen E. Pratt, was elated, and they immediately set out to get delegates from other towns, believing that they had a long lead towards capturing the county convention in having beaten Faunce in his own home.

This is the seventh time that Mr. Faunce has been a candidate for member of the County Commission. The term is three years.

Mr. Bailey was born in Kingston February 10, 1874. He is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, class '96, department of civil engineering, he has served on the staff of engineers of the Boston subway and has had charge of several undertakings of the Harbor and Land Commission. He is now serving his third term as selectman, assessor and overseer of the poor of Kingston.

PIPE BURSTS; TEARS BIG HOLE IN STREET

Geyser Spurts From Watertown Main Drenching Scores of Passersby.

With a roar like booming of cannon, the water main on Main street, Watertown, near the bridge of the Fitchburg Railway, burst late yesterday afternoon, tearing a hole in the street thirty feet long and ten feet deep, casting dirt and debris high in the air and causing the water to spurt as from a geyser, drenching scores of passersby. Travel by electric cars was stopped for two hours, and the streets closed until the main was repaired.

It is supposed the break was caused by heavy trains weakening the supports of the pipe. The street was filled with people when suddenly the middle of the road was torn up and, with a deep rumbling, the water and dirt rose high in the air. Pedestrians fled quickly from the scene, not until, however, many were drenched by the water and covered with the dirt.

A repair gang was quickly put to work, the water was shut off and in two hours the street was once more open to traffic. The losers will be considerable.

Egyptian Prince, in Boston, Sees Sights Without Guide's Aid

Comes to Hub From Newport, Stays Few Hours, and Vanishes.

Traveling without attendants, the young Prince d'Abro Parratide of Egypt, fresh from Newport and New York, was about Boston yesterday looking at things in his own way, with no guide to lead him. The prince, who is twenty-one, and comes from an ancient family of Egypt, dropped into the Adams House, took a room, stayed an hour or so, then rode to the Touraine, had lunch and then vanished.

The Prince's principal host in New York and Newport was Henry Clews, the millionaire banker. The Prince has been in the United States the past two months and has traveled in the Northwest. He intends to look over the cotton industry in Texas, for cotton is an Egyptian product and the British will men would like to encourage its growth in the hope it will shut out the American product.

First Wife Works as Maid at Winthrop to Support Three Children.

SECOND CLINGS TO HIM

In Syracuse, N. Y., Jail He Tells of His Remarkable Dual Romances.

IT was because he was convinced that the love decreed from eternity would be consummated only by a dual marriage, so declares Charles A. White of Lynn, that he was unable to withstand the yearnings of his soul and married Miss Sarah E. Sheehan, on September 18, notwithstanding he knew his wife and three children were alive and anxious for his association and aid.

White is now in a Syracuse, N. Y. jail, charged with bigamy. "His 'affinity,'" Miss Sheehan, is on her way to Lynn, while his lawful spouse, formerly Miss Naphia Cashill of Rollo Bay, Prince Edward Island, is in Winthrop, hoping the man whom she claims wronged her will meet a deserved punishment.

According to White, his first marriage was a forced one. His joining in wedlock with Miss Sheehan, he says, was but the linking of two souls in [illegible] love. [illegible] was reciprocated. Mrs. White No. 1 is more plain spoken, and says it was a case of desertion, and a villain's scheme to wrong not only herself and three children, but Miss Sheehan as well.

Divergence in Ages.

Speaking to a Boston Sunday American reporter yesterday in the [illegible] jail, White said he had no end the [illegible] but could [illegible]

"I was forced into the marriage with Miss Cashill," said White, "but my marriage to Miss Sheehan was the result of love on both sides. I never loved Mrs. White. She was seven years older than I, and I was but nineteen years old while she was thirty-six years of age.

"I returned to the farm of her brother [illegible] three years. Then I left [illegible] Mrs. White knows. I [illegible] I still [illegible] and [illegible] Rollo Bay, Prince Edward Island.

His Defeat as Delegate to General Conference Causes Church Split.

CHURCHMEN IN REVOLT

COLUMBUS, Ind., Sept. 28.—One little cocktail, which Vice-President Charles Wesley Fairbanks served at a dinner when President Theodore Roosevelt was a guest in last Memorial Day, and which caused the defeat of the Vice President as the position of delegate to the next general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Baltimore next May, has resulted in creating some bitter feeling in the church in this State. # FOOTBALL ON COLLEGE GRIDIRONS

HARVARD ELEVEN WILL PLAY FIRST GAME ON WEDNESDAY

Coach Crane Has Big List of Candidates, But so Far No Real Stars Have Been Discovered.

Ten days have elapsed since Harvard's football candidates reported, and in point of numbers have left nothing to be desired, for ninety men have entered their names as candidates. The material is, however, only average, and there are few if any real stars among them. This makes Coach Crane's task all the more difficult, for it will be a trying matter to fill in the places left open by last year's graduates. Added to this, is the fact that the team this year will be essentially different from that of previous years, so that if Coach Crane turns out a winning team he should receive all possible credit.

Crane Works Hard.

Even in the preliminary work Crane has shown that he fully recognizes these facts, and has gone about his work in a very concise manner. To begin with, the old style of falling on the ball has been done away with and the men have been practised in scooping up the ball on the run. Great stress has been laid upon speed, and the ends have been tried in dodging, while going a few yards down instead of having the teams go through the simple line bucking plays and running, as has been the case here-to-fore, has been practised. The same is true of the kicking and forward pass to a great extent. All these things are radically opposed to the preliminary training of other years and would seem to show that Crane knows just what he is doing.

No New Plays Yet.

In all probability the team will go into the game with Bowdoin on Wednesday with no more plays than what they now know. These plays are the forward pass, triple pass, onside kick, and the old Harvard play with the triple pass as a finishing as yet, but the forward pass has worked better. The forward pass is almost identical with that used by Yale last season, as is the onside kick formation.

Many men will probably be tried out in Wednesday's game, so as to enable the coaches to get a line on them when under fire.

After these preliminary tryouts the men were finally given scrimmage work on Friday, the whole team being put through a hard scrimmage, in which the other's signals the plays were known before they were used in the game, but even at that the forward pass worked somewhat successfully.

No Mollycoddles.

As far as the prospects for a winning team can be taken into consideration, not much can be said at present. Nevertheless, it can be stated that Harvard does not have a team of "mollycoddles" by any means whatsoever.

To begin with a line that will compare favorably with that of any other college is a reasonable certainty.

For the centre position, Captain Parker, of course, is the choice, but he will have a strong contender for his place in Hurley, who won his H this year as a guard and in C. J. Nourse. One of the guard positions will be filled by Burnham, who has returned from Europe in grand condition, and his gaining of ten pounds has by no means lost none of his former skill.

The other guard position is open for competition, and J. F. Alley, a large, heavy man, promises to put up a hard fight for the place. Lorie is a possible candidate, he being also a guard, and he could fill position from tackle, either Ben Dabis or Joseph West, Holden are also there that has Pierce, if not moved into the guard position will put up an excellent game at end, and there are many good men for the other place. Robinson, Hoar and Inches form a strong trio, while Blanchard, Forster, Carpenter and Fisher, are not to be despised.

Oliver Cutts, the star tackle, of Davy Campbell's winning eleven, will be on hand this week to coach the linesmen, and there promises to be some fast and furious work when he arrives.

Many Try for Ends.

Harvard has a wealth of material, much above the average, to draw upon for the end positions. Victor Kennard and Jim Marchand are a strong and fast pair, and with M. C. Pierce, the andover star, Walter Bird, Miller L. Beard, and Delbert Houston, Coach Lefty will have enough to pick from the better men.

In the back field there is more of a problem which would be much more MUDDLED if Neville's ability was not known. Last year Wendell was the best man in the backfield, and he did some very consistent ground gainer on the team. If the faculty will remove his probation look so that he may play in the early games, the undergraduates would feel much more relieved. There is not much doubt, however, but that he will be able to play in the Yale game, for after the hour examinations, he would be placed in regular standing, because he made up his deficiencies at the Summer school.

Lockwood Back Again.

Phil Lockwood, who has returned to college, will probably be first choice for left half back, as his speed and bulk make him an ideal man for the place.

Ted Coolidge, of Worden, who would be placed at half back, there are numerous men including Rand, Enos, Gilbert, Chase, Gilder, Gradon, and Gregory. These men are all of average ability, but not exactly in Wendell's class.

Apollonio was the first choice for fullback, but Mason is a hard plunger and a good all around player, and will make a fight for the place.

Dave Newhall, of last year's eleven, is again out for quarter, as is Starr who played end last year and quarter the year before. Because they both are experienced, and are sure catchers of punts, Newhall, however, is the better punter, and this may give him a slight advantage.

Training Table to Start.

On Monday the training table starts at Memorial Hall, and Trainer Barney, who will be the original members. These men are Parker, Burt, Pierce, Newhall, Starr, Wendell and Mason, and the others will be MacDonald, Kennard and Lockwood.

The names of all the men out for the team are as follows:

Ends—Pierce, Alley, J. S. Barr, L. Beard, A. S. Brewer, G. H. Bowers, H. C. Blanchard, Carpenter, Cutts, Fisher, Forster, Gilbert, O. G. Hall, A. Brock, J. L. Burke, F. S. Hoar, Inches, Kennard, Marchand, Robinson, Rand, Sweetser, Houston, Wendell, Wilson.

SPRINGFIELD CONVENTION GREAT AID TO MOTORISTS

Up to the Clubs to Carry Out Many Good Ideas Presented by the Speakers.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

No one thing in recent years has been more beneficial to the cause of motoring than the recent good roads and legislative convention of the Springfield Automobile Club. This organization is deserving of the greatest of praise in devising, planning and carrying to a successful conclusion such a convention as was held under its auspices during the past week.

It brought men of many minds and great ability together to discuss for the common good the many questions of the motoring world, and while we do not agree with everything that was said by the different speakers there cannot be any question as to the ultimate good of the arguments and reasoning. Of course the real good of such a convention of this nature cannot be measured by what was done there. It cannot be measured or realized in a day, nor in a year, but in the work of the future, such as road work and legislation, it cannot help but have an important bearing.

Up to the Clubs Now.

The Springfield Club did its share toward working in the right direction. It now remains for the clubs, not only in this section, but of the entire country, to place their shoulders to the wheel, get busy and push hard with the good impetus that convention has given them. The delegates in convention were impressed with the earnestness of the speakers, all of which was the seriousness and interest which all motorists, who are a unit on the good roads question and legislative matters, should take in the matter, and those who drive motors. It is for the delegates to return to their several clubs, report the proceedings of the meeting and do their part toward advancing the general interests.

That the convention was of importance is shown by the fact that the American Automobile Association had, through its board of officers, determined to hold one such meeting each year, if only this is done then the object can well feel proud of her initial work. But the beneficial results will be even greater than that. The exchanging of views of the different road builders and engineers all has a tendency towards greater efficiency in many directions.

All of the speakers were interesting in their remarks and their thoughts fairly many interesting side lights.

Throughout the good roads sessions motors came in for more or less severe criticism, and in a measure were held responsible for the wearing away of the surface of the roads, and especially that of the macadam roads. And yet one speaker said that the car that commenced going at the rate of fifteen miles an hour did no more injury to the road than did the horse-drawn vehicle. The injury is felt was caused by the driver's desire to drive at twenty or more miles an hour. However, it was generally admitted that the real work of the motor car is found to secure some means or method of settling the dust nuisance, and throughout the meeting by resolution pledged itself in favor of the use by the park commissioners of the different sections of evil substances as have been found efficient in eliminating dust and preserving the road surface.

Dr. Cushman's Views.

Dr. A. S. Cushman, the assistant director of public roads of the department of agriculture, in speaking at the session said,

"The modern road problem has two important aspects. First, the public road is a feeder of railroads, distributing to the people the products, but the railroads are the trunk lines that must connect them with the outside world. In the development wonderful machinery and at the same time the construction of our roads has not harvested proportionately. We have paved splendid sets of road building that is the admiration of foreigners, especially Napoleon. George Washington was the pioneer road builder in America, and yet seven of the first public road that was laid out in America there is not a mile of it. Instead, it has been kept in repair until it would not be known as a road. It is said that only 7 per cent of the roads are improved.

"The board of which I am a member was organized as recently as 1894 in response to the needs of the people. The board of agriculture was organized by farmers on low to improve the roads. Although we do not engage in actual road construction, yet we help the people, rural communities and cities to improve their highway laws. We have spread everywhere the knowledge of good highways. Here in Massachusetts when you have some of the oldest cities and greatest colleges of the country, you may not realize that there exists in the Union where the schools and the churches can't be reached by good roads. The condition of the roads resulting from poor laws means a great loss to the country. The illiteracy in those states is directly due to the condition of the roads. It is a fact that wherever there are good roads the children in the country schools are happy and that where the roads are bad the children are unhappy. The Lord says that a community is negligent of its roads, it will be negligent of its children and will not grow good citizens. We need more widespread interest in our roads. Public thoroughfares are the arteries of the country's broad and not a local issue. You need have. Everyone is interested in the work of furthering the country's march of progress."

Legislative Session.

The legislative session was productive of many good laws which have been adopted in several localities, and if some similar scheme were further extended it would be well for the speed fiend. Everybody one agreed that individual effort counted for little in the solution of the matter of securing proper legislation. That effort must however be combined to secure the work of securing more favorable legislation, but many agreed that the only way to put an end to the law-breaking of the individual who brings discredit upon the sport as a whole. As one speaker at the meeting said, it is 2 per cent of the operators, and they mainly chauffeurs, who cause to be enacted the drastic laws of the different States. The other 98 per cent. use the roads sanely and properly. Traps are essentially wrong. They have given a much too wrong man, as the scorers of scores them a mile away.

As Chairman McClintock said:

"The proper men to see that the auto mobile law is enforced and obeyed are the automobilists and their clubs. By organized action you can weed out the park breakers and convince the public that you have a wholesome appreciation of its rights in the highways."

Autoists Serve as Police.

In Buffalo, that city of asphalt streets and thousands of automobiles, there have been but few arrests during the past year and decided few accidents. This, it is believed, is due to the fact that the police department of that city has appointed certain specified men with all powers of the regular police officers, these men being conferred upon members of the automobile organizations. It is unknown to the officers at large. The result is that the speed laws when he is being followed by a special, which is more or less a degree to speed, when these deputies have not fixed the duties for which they were appointed.

There is no denying the fact that it is by individual effort which will count in a long run; which will impress the public with the fact that motorists as a class are not law breakers that they are and only willing to respect the rights of others, not because the law says they shall, but from a sense of justice to everyone.

The owner and driver will not take the chances of meeting with an accident. In the first place he has no desire to take the chances, and in the second place he is not willing to cause injury as does the reckless driver, and the fact that he is always under some one greater than can be known by the mere payment of a large sum of money. He has a conscience and will not willfully, knowingly or deliberately seek to injure another. When he does it accidentally, and accidents do happen, and that you, as a class of users, realize he is the one who suffers the most, inasmuch if not physically

No Traps in the West.

The men from the Western and Middle States were rather surprised at the statements of New England speed regulations. They have none in their section of the country, for the reason that there is no state speed law, and no small town or village can make a speed law other than that provided by the state, as of the State of Ohio, which provides that no person shall run a motor vehicle on the streets of any city or village at a greater speed than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the traffic then on, or likely to be on, and to the use of the street or highway and the safety of the public. The amount of speed which is reasonable and proper in any city or village shall be determined by the character of the pavement and condition of the street or highway, the amount of traffic thereon, and the law of the place, and if the governing board of any city or village shall make any different laws. There is really no valid reason why there should not be a state speed law. The bicycle is governed by a state law in Massachusetts and the motor vehicle be placed in the same position.

"BAREFOOT GIRL" NOW LIES IN GRAVE

Name of Prudence Mae Simmons for Last Time on Police Books.

STRANGE CAREER IS ENDED

Remarkable Young Woman's Escapades Long a Puzzle to Criminologists.

About [illegible] at No. 17 A [illegible] street, Cambridge, on a cold, disagreeable, weather marked [illegible] a score of the attorneys gathered [illegible] afternoon and endeavored to hear the eulogies that a minister was saying over the casket that contained the remains of one of the most remarkable young women that ever entered the attention of [illegible].

In the [illegible] was being held the last services for Prudence Mae Simmons, the "barefoot girl," whose record marks page after page in the criminal register more than an [illegible].

Prudence Simmons died at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Rev. John L. Tilley, pastor of the First Baptist church of Cambridge, conducted the services at the home of Mrs. George [illegible], of Prudence.

No one knew the girl's story, knew the secret of her life. His words were few for the good that was in the girl he praised.

Harmed Only Herself.

Despite the fact that time and time again Prudence Simmons was taken to a station house in either Boston or some surrounding city, not once was it ever made a song that she did harm to anyone save herself.

It was true that she told stories about being dragged when she failed to find other explanation for the peculiar condition in which she was found, but she never went so far as to accuse anyone, always in these escapades she was without shoes, hence her name.

She was born in Pictou, Nova Scotia, and after her father's death her mother married again. When Prudence and her sister, Louise, were little girls the family moved to Boston. It was here that the strange career of Prudence began.

Eight years ago the sisters were opened to be known on the streets of the North End somehow they were taken aboard a Gloucester fishing schooner and were put ashore when the schooner got in at the home port. It was just love of excitement that made them do it the girls said.

Escapes from Refuge.

Some time after that a North End police officer found them on the streets one night and sent them to the station where it was decided that they were better off in some home. They escaped from the refuge.

From the time that she was sixteen years old Prudence commenced to make history for the Boston police department. One night she was rescued in a half drowned condition from the Charles river. Asked how she got there she said that a young man had taken her out in a boat and when she tried to catch hold of a passing vessel she had fallen into the water.

Another time she was "drugged and pushed into the river." Again she had been "out with a Harvard professor who drugged her and then put her on a car without her shoes.

The police could do nothing with her. Lenient and [illegible] efforts of reformers proved [illegible].

She was not a [illegible] troubles. Her sister, Louise, was [illegible] like mother Reuben, a hairdresser [illegible], learned [illegible] Prudence's [illegible] she [illegible] herself from a relief [illegible] floor of the [illegible].

Sent Away for Last Time.

It was not many months ago that Prudence was taken in charge by the police for the last time [illegible] charged with circumstances [illegible] the death of a man in the West End. It was thought that she was innocent of any part in his death, but she was sent away for a long [illegible].

It was then the [illegible] was interested themselves in the girl. Certain [illegible] had long [illegible] and [illegible] to secure treatment [illegible] to the [illegible] went to the hospital where [illegible] found [illegible] was to death she became a different girl.

In her last [illegible] she seemed to have but one [illegible] and [illegible] for any wrong [illegible] had done.

The end was [illegible], and without a struggle.

She was buried in [illegible] Cambridge cemetery.

Talks on Teeth

BY

G. GORDON MARTIN

(Incorporated)

Notice to Impostors

We regret to say that the great success attained by this company in the restoration of missing teeth by the patented process known as The Alveolar Method has aroused the cupidity of unscrupulous dentists in many cities in this country.

In many cases they have stolen our advertisements and literature "Lock, Stock and Barrel," and fraudulently converted them to their own uses.

They have promised to give patients the genuine Alveolar Method, although fully aware that it is a patented process and only to be obtained in one of our offices in Chicago, New York, Boston or Kansas City.

This is a dangerous counterfeit, for the teeth are too valuable a possession to be ignorantly treated.

The man who counterfeits money or goods is a menace to society, and the law, recognizing this, punishes him according to his deserts.

We herewith serve notice on those impostors that they must not only stop using our advertising matter but also the use of the word Alveolar as applied to a method of restoring missing teeth without the use of plates or bridge work, as we only have been granted the sole right to this word in this connection.

There are dentists in this city who are claiming to practice Alveolar Dentistry.

What do you think of these impostors?

Would you trust a counterfeiter?

The man who would rob us would in turn rob you. He is a self-confessed thief and not to be trusted with so important a piece of work as the restoration of your teeth.

Once again let us state most emphatically that the Alveolar Method of restoring teeth without plates is only to be obtained in one of our offices. There is no method that has so completely revolutionized dental science as this, and there is nothing which approaches it to be had elsewhere.

Our business has grown from a modest beginning in a small office in Chicago a little over four years ago to the largest dental business in the world, because the Alveolar Method is a wonderful advance in the science of dentistry.

Merit has made it grow.

Don't be hoodwinked by these imitators who can copy nothing save our advertising.

Patients come to us from all over America, Canada and Mexico.

Nearly 12,000 of them have come to us in four years!

The new teeth we supply are worth all the sacrifice of time and money they cost to secure them.

They are practically new teeth, natural in appearance and feeling. These are what you want if you have lost your teeth. The ability to supply them calls for skilled dentists, trained in our offices and laboratories, under our direct supervision.

We believe this warning will be sufficient for you to avoid the impostor, and for him to avoid stealing our business in future. We shall proceed against them, one and all, in vigorous fashion, if they persist in their nefarious practices.

Send for our book "Alveolar Dentistry," a treatise on the teeth by G. Gordon Martin, M. D., D. D. S., which explains the method in detail, unless you can do the better thing and come to one of our offices to have the work done.

A careful diagnosis and examination of your teeth will cost you nothing.

The work is painless and calls for no cutting or boring into the gums, and the most difficult cases rarely take more than from four to five days to complete.

Your teeth troubles will then be at an end.

NEW PAYMENT RULE OF SCHOOL BOARD STIRS BOSTON TEACHERS.

Instructors Roused Because Salaries Are Held Up 15 Days Longer Than in the Past.

MRS. DUFF'S OPINION

Former Member of Committee Scores New Proceedure, Declaring It 'Campaign Trick.'

SCHOOL teachers are disturbed because of the new payment rule put into effect by the School Board which delays payment of salaries until October 15, whereas under the old system they would have been paid last Wednesday.

The School Board says that the delay will be only temporary and will result in the end in payment of salaries regularly at the first of each month.

Teachers, however, fear that the fifteen days delay which confronts them now will be permanent. The School Board, through a representative, states to the Boston American that it will not be so. It is said that the system will go into force now because it is at the beginning of a school year, and at this time will work less hardship on the teachers, many of whom did not return from Summer vacations until nearly the middle of September, than at any other time. The new system was adopted, the School Board agent says, after long deliberation, because it was a business like proceeding and of advantage to the city while no detriment to teachers.

Mrs. Duff Teacher's Champion.

But many teachers are aggrieved and complaints regarding the matter have been made.

Mrs. Julia E. Duff, a former member of the board and one who still takes the keenest interest in the public schools and their teachers has come forward as champion of the instructors. To the Boston American she said:

"The new system is the product of the financial minds which now control the School Board. It will continue as long as our schools are governed on the financiers instead of educators. Figures are convincing when submitted by persons who are expert at juggling with them.

"The whole thing is nothing more than a campaign trick. Last year they claimed to have a surplus of $15,000. They forgot that the amount was to be covered by a special appropriation of $89,000 from the building fund granted them by the Legislature.

"Desperate Politics."

"Watch this same committee this year and see if they do not hold before the citizens' eyes the sum of $200,000, which they have held up from our teachers. They will point to the figures as a reason for getting or not daring to mention the fact that the money is owed our salaries. It is desperate politics and nothing more.

"Our present School Board has spent a lot of money and they are faced with a money shortage. To this crisis they have proceeded to hold up the docile and long-suffering teachers, who have not protest. They go quietly to work—our financier educators—and evolve a plan for saving money. The school department payroll retain nearly $200,000 a month. They hold up this money from the teachers for nearly a month and with the use of it and interest on it make financial wonders.

"This identical measure was introduced by Dr. Daniel S. Harkins more than two years ago and was killed by the committee as a hardship on our teachers."

Question Up to Smith.

James J. Storrow, chairman of the School Board, and Stratton Brooks, school superintendent, refused to talk, and put the matter up to William Smith, the business agent.

"The so-called 'new' system," said Mr. Smith, "is but an adjustment of a system that was irregular and unbusinesslike. Under the old method teachers were paid for a whole month before the month had expired. Under the new method they will be paid at the end of the month. To make up the payroll requires a few days. This month ten days will be needed. Next month we expect to open Monday, and before long we hope to make payments promptly at the end of each month. We are simply adopting a system in vogue in all good business houses. Is there any would think of paying its help before they had earned the money. Why should the city of Boston do so?"

DISPUTE DELAYS EVERETT RECOUNT

Because the attorneys and board of registrars of voters of Everett could not reach a decision in the interpretation of the new recount laws, the recount ordered by yesterday afternoon for the Glidden and Cox delegates in Ward 1, ward 6, has been postponed until Thursday evening. At that time the city solicitor will give an opinion as to whether or not a recount can be held.

Glidden was represented at the recount by Former City Solicitor James of Chelsea, and the Glidden delegation opposed the recount. Of the six delegates for whom a recount was asked, Glidden now has five and Cox one. Three of the Glidden are separated by three votes and the other two by one vote.

Fashionable Hub Dressmakers Laugh at Mrs. White's 'Hipless Gown' and Call It "Style 3 Years Old Under New Name"

'They Will Never Be Worn by the Society Women of Boston," Declares Back Bay Modiste.

Do Boston women still cling to the gowns that prominently display the curves of the figure or do they favor that hipless creation advocated by Mrs. Elizabeth White of dressmakers' convention fame?

Apparently the hipless wins, for according to Boston modistes who plan for the smart women of the Back Bay, their customers have been wearing practically what Mrs. White describes for the last three years.

Mrs. White has just coined a new name for the Empire or Directoire gown which I and others have in my establishment for nearly three years, and which came out in Paris longer ago than that. It is an old fashion really, just under a new name, that's all."

But whether new or old it is a fact that the hipless affair finds considerable favor in the sight of women who are well dressed.

Eleanor Gordon Glad.

Miss Eleanor Gordon, the new leading woman at the Boston Theatre, whose costumes are the delight as well as the envy of her women admirers, is glad that the "no hips" style is to be worn. Now Miss Gordon has been greatly burdened as to figure but she thinks slim people are "too nice to look at and then it's more natural too" she says.

"You never see statues or paintings of fat women do you?" Miss Gordon demanded. "They are always slim and graceful. Big hips aren't natural. Of course, I don't know what the poor women who have large hips are going to do to take them down. It will be hard on them, but I am very glad that the style is here. It is sort of getting back to nature, you know. As for me—well, I won't worry over it."

"New Name for Old Gown."

But the real smart modistes of the Back Bay don't quite see why there is furore now and about Mrs. White's designation of the hipless as new. Mme. Driscoll of Boylston street, who returned from Paris and who made Alice Roosevelt Longworth's first inaugural ball dress, wasn't quite sure what Mrs. White meant by "hipless," when she was asked her opinion by a Sunday American reporter.

Explanations were made. Mme. Driscoll then understood. She said:

"Evidently by coining a new name for the Empire gown, which has been worn in Paris so long and which I have been fashioning here for three years, it has been made to appear that it is something new. Our best people, however, spend much time in Paris each year, so they had these gowns when they first came out, and what I now seem there is more than I can use. The only thing is that a majority of Americans who never go abroad and who have no friends or acquaintances going have to wait for some one like Mrs. White to go and see for them."

The Misses Holmes, importers, said the Empire or Directoire gown had been worn for several seasons. It was a pretty and graceful style they said, and that it counted for its popularity. "It is the going from the very long waist which was popular for so long, to the other extreme," said one of them. "But the very latest is again the long waist, so you see how the fashions change. The best dressed women never go to extremes, and some of the models shown are far too exaggerated to be ever worn by them."

A fashion steel dressmaker when asked about the "no hips" picked out the Empire as the creation meant. She laughed over it.

"Never'll Be Worn in Boston."

"Of course I had to bring some of these rather exaggerated models to the fashion," she said, "but they will never be worn by the society women of Boston. Boston women are too conservative. No doubt they will be worn quite generally in New York, for that is just the sort of place that for after these things, something extreme. Of course Paquin makes the fashions and he has decreed that the loose skirt must go and just now the riding habit effect with the high waist is attracting much attention and comment. Paquin follows a certain period in his styles and the Directoire is the one being followed now."

And these smart dressmakers concede that the women who don't go to Paris and who have been wearing the loose skirt and the long-waisted gowns so long will welcome the change which has just been brought to their notice, even though it isn't new.

It appears to be a fact that no matter whether she broached something new or not Mrs. White has set people to talking and even made the dressmakers interested.

TO LEAVE BRIDE OF WEEK FOR 4 YEARS

Officer on Evans's Flagship Gets Orders to Sail and Arranges for Wedding.

Worcester, Sept. 28.—A week's honeymoon and then a four-years' separation is the prospect confronting John Joseph Lyons, a petty officer on Admiral Evans' flagship, the Maine, who came to his home here to-day and secured a license for his marriage with Miss Margaret A. Morris of Newton. Lyons says that the impression is pretty general among the men of Evans' squadron that the Pacific cruise about to begin will last four years.

When he applied for leave to get married he was told that his bride would not be likely to see him again for that period; but this information only hastened the decision of the engaged pair to get married as soon as possible. The ceremony will occur on October 1 at Newton and on October 8 Lyons will leave his bride with his sister in this city and rejoin his ship.

CHARGE PERJURY IN GREEK BOY'S ENTRY

Rich Cambridge Man Held for U. S. Court in Immigration Case.

Louis Zoggas, a well to do and well-known Cambridge man, is charged by Immigration Commissioner Hayes with perjury in the entry and conspiracy in the illegal entering of Zoggas, a boy of seventeen Kostas, a Greek lad, aged 16.

Kostas arrived at Boston September 5 under a different name. According to the immigration officials, he was met at Charlestown by Zoggas and Antonio Viterlana, who claimed to be the boy's father. Viterlana acted suspiciously and the lad was detained.

It is claimed they swore that they were respectively father and son, and that Zoggas swore that he knew them bore that relation. Later the boy confessed that the man was not his father.

Zoggas pleaded not guilty before United States Commissioner Hayes yesterday and is under $1000 bail, his case to come up in the United States Court in October. The lad is held as a witness.

The boy will eventually be deported.

SAYS CO-OPERATION GROWS IN ENGLAND

F. Maddison, M. P., Delivers Address Before the Twentieth Century Club.

MANY OTHER SPEAKERS

President of Ceylon College Predicts Great Future for India.

The growth of the co-operative movement in England was the subject of the address, delivered by F. Maddison, M. P., of London, England, at the first regular Saturday afternoon luncheon of the Twentieth Century Club, yesterday afternoon.

Hon. F. Maddison, together with six other notable foreign speakers, and the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, chaplain of the United States Senate, spoke to one of the largest audiences in the history of the club. All of the speakers, with the exception of the Rev. Dr. Hale, are delegates to the Congress of Religious Liberals, which was held in this city last week. Mr. Maddison said in part:

Cites Notable Example.

"The co-operative movement is sometimes confused with social reform and the movement instituted by the State Socialists. Social reform works through the individual, while Socialism works through the power of the State. Co-operation is the medium between the two.

"With us a co-operative society must be beneficial to all. Not only that but it must be open to all. I was greatly interested, when at Plymouth recently, to notice two different so-called co-operative societies. I investigated both. In one only the shareholders were benefited, and not in the other, although everybody benefited, the membership was limited. In England neither of these two styles are what we are striving for. The co-operative movement must not only be beneficial to each and everyone, but the membership must be open to all.

"The most notable example of a successful co-operative society that I can show is that of the Rochdale Pioneers. At present this society has a membership of over two million and a half shareholders, and a capital of over $151,000,000. The profits thus far distributed by the society are approximately $50,000,000. At present, the society owns over $18,000,000 worth of real estate. The beauty of it all is that the share-holders are all wage earners.

Predicts Great Future for India.

"An example of the partial co-partnership principle we have is the South Metropolitan Gas Company. Since its organization a few years ago the employees have received $30,000, of which amount they have re-invested $240,000. Last year $40,000 was divided among them, and all this on top of a standard wage scale."

Miss Mary Richmond, of New Zealand, was the next speaker. She spoke principally on the growth of her country.

Miss Richmond was followed by the Rev. C. F. Fleischer of Holland. He spoke of the work of the Hygiene Health Society, of his country and said that he was pleased to see the same work going on "in so small a town as Worcester."

The Rev. W. G. Tarrant and the Rev. Copeland Bowie, both of London, followed him. Both spoke of the improvement of the slums of London since the work in those quarters commenced.

S. C. Peiris, Buttuan, M. A., president of the Central College, Colombo, Ceylon, who delivered a lecture after the luncheon on "The New India," declared that India will soon surprise the world more than Japan did.

POLICE ARREST 4 OF FORTY THIEVES

Youths Taken Into Custody Charged With Stealing $17.50 From Immigrant.

Four of the "Forty Thieves," as they are called by the police, were arrested last night by Inspector O'Neil and Patrolmen O'Donnell and Fitzpatrick of Station 7. East Boston, charged with stealing $17.50 from an immigrant on the Cunard Line wharf, East Boston, last Thursday.

Those arrested are all youths. They gave their names as Frank Riccio, aged 15, No. 50 Lexington street; Edward Malnick, aged 17, No. 33 Maverick square; Edward A. Doogan, aged 16, No. 49 Saratoga street, and Frank J. Alden, 17, No. 197 Sumner street.

The sum covers further fortification of Vladivostok, improvements to the naval port at Nikolayevsk, on the Amur, near its mouth, and the construction of immense barracks at Khabarovsk, at the junction of the Amur and Ussuri rivers.

PLAN AUTOPSY TO CLEAR BOY'S DEATH

Tragedy Follows Prank of Youngsters Who Fled Pursuing Men.

FIND BODY NEXT MORNING

Lad Separates From Chums After Racing Away From Grape Vine.

Until an autopsy is held the mystery surrounding the death of James A. Toomey, aged seventeen years, whose body was found in a field adjoining the residence of Joseph C. Moore, No. 87 Prospect avenue, Revere, early yesterday, will not be cleared. Associate Medical Examiner Stedman from a superficial examination of the body thought that young Toomey died from strangulation, some partially masticated grapes being found in his mouth. Dr. Stedman decided, however, that an autopsy would be necessary.

Young Toomey lived at No. 56 Penn street. According to the statements of some boys who admitted being with him, he was one of a party that partook of some grapes on the vines in the yard of the house, No. 115 Reservoir avenue, occupied by Roscoe Richardson and George Johnson.

Gave Chase After Lads.

It was about 9:15 Friday night when Mr. Richardson and Mr. Johnson were sitting in the parlor of the latter's apartments on the first floor that they saw six boys in the yard. Rosa ran away and when the boys saw them they ran.

"We chased them about twenty feet," Mr. Johnson told a Sunday American reporter today. "Then I fell down and hit my nose so that it bled. With that both Mr. Richardson and myself turned to the house. Both of us are more sorry than we can say for what happened but we did no more harm to the boys than to chase them that short distance. So far as we noticed we were not doing anything unusual."

William Pratt of Page street and William Butler of No. 15 Oliver street told the police that the rest of the boys ran through the avenue and at the town hall stopped to see who was missing. They found that Toomey was not with them and one of the boys remembered seeing him vault the fence near the Moore house and supposed he had gone home that way.

May Have Strangled.

They met later near the Toomey house and John Toomey, father of the dead boy, called out to know if Ambrose, as he called his son, was with them. They told the father that he was not. Mr. Toomey made the discover when he left the house to go to his work that his son had not returned. He was notified of the boy's death until some hours later.

Charles J. Myett of No. 117 Prospect avenue found the body about 7 o'clock yesterday morning. He was on his way to work and after making the discovery notified Chief Hall and also Mr. Toomey and Examiner Magrath.

The result of the examination developed there were no marks about young Toomey's body that indicated that he had been assaulted in any way. It is the belief of the police that he ran away from the Richardson and Johnson house with his mouth full of grapes, and that the grapes, choking and vaulting the fence caused them to stick in his throat and thereby killed him.

Toomey was employed as a press feeder at the Forbes Lithographic works. He graduated from the Centre School and went two years to the Revere High School, where he was prominent on the baseball nine. He was a finely developed lad and full for his age.

CAR RACES DEATH IN EAST RIVER TUNNEL

With Flames and Smoke Filling N. Y. Tube, Motorman Sends Trolley Mile in Minute.

New York, Sept. 28.—Racing far below the bed of the East River from death in the form of cremation or suffocation in the new Belmont tunnel, a party of thirty-five men escaped so narrowly to-day that several were compelled to beat flames from their clothing when the car in which they were making the trip shot from the Long Island City end of the tube.

The car probably took fire from sparks from the overhead trolley wire. Several moments were lost in investigation. The tunnel filled so rapidly with smoke that the danger of suffocation prevented an escape.

The motorman turned on full speed and the car, containing more than a minute its motion fanned the flames to such an extent that the roof of the forward platform was burned in the roof as it sped.

The passengers included several well known men, among them Tunnel Superintendent Van Siclen and Postmaster Ripperger of Long Island City.

Perfect Womanhood

The greatest menace to woman's permanent happiness in life is the suffering that comes from some derangement of the feminine organs.

Many thousands of women have realized this too late to save their health, barely in time to save their lives.

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, should be a woman's constant study.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging, that she gets easily tired, dark shadows appear under her eyes, she has backache, headache, bearing-down pains, nervousness, irregularities or the "blues," she should start at once to build up her system by a tonic with specific powers, such as the great woman's remedy for woman's ills, made only of roots and herbs.

It cures Female Complaints, such as Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and all Organic Diseases, and is invaluable in the Change of Life. It dissolves and Expels Tumors at an early stage. Subdues Faintness, Nervous Prostration, Exhaustion, and strengthens and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, and invigorates the whole female system. It is an excellent remedy for derangements of the Kidneys in either sex.

BOY, HURLED FROM WAGON, NEAR DEATH

Livermore, Me., Sept. 28.—Hiram Pickens, a seventeen-year-old youth, is hovering between life and death, because his team became frightened and threw him to the roadside, where he lay unconscious for some time before he was picked up. His mother became hysterical when notified of the accident and is under the care of a physician. The lad's skull was fractured and he received internal injuries.

FEAR RICH BUILDER VICTIM OF ROBBERS

Police Lead Fruitless Search for Moses P. Wheeler, Missing From Springfield.

MILKMAN FURNISHES CLUE

Believed to Have Carried Large Sum of Money When He Disappeared.

Springfield, Sept. 28.—That Moses P. Wheeler, a wealthy retired builder of this city, has met with foul play is the opinion of his relatives. A search was made yesterday in the woods between Indian Orchard and Indianola Falls, and another today, but both proved fruitless. To-morrow a more general search will be instituted.

The only clue discovered to-day was furnished by a milkman named Levon, who says a man answering Mr. Wheeler's description accosted him near Carver's mill in Ludlow early Friday morning and said he was hungry. Levon gave him some apples and the man continued on his way. Tuesday afternoon Mr. Wheeler was seen in Ludlow and asked the way to Sherman street in this city, where he has a home.

Had Large Sum of Money.

Mr. Wheeler was known to have a large sum of money on his person, and the belief grows that he has either been robbed and murdered or else is being held at one of the "shacks" for a reward. It is not far from where Mr. Wheeler was last seen that Hugh J. Kane, the Ludlow City milkman, was murdered and robbed of $30 a month ago.

Mr. Wheeler, who had been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Charles S. Clark, wife of a prominent physician in Worcester, left her home Tuesday noon and took an electric car for this city. For some reason he left the car at Ludlow. He was knocked down by an automobile some months ago and it is believed he was never fully recovered and was in a dazed condition. He is seventy-nine years of age and it is estimated is worth several hundred thousand dollars.

Police Lead Search.

The search is being conducted by Chief of Police Hall E. Storer of Ludlow and Patrolman Charles A. Wade of this city, who is a son-in-law of the missing man.
